

The WEEK

By A. M. BRAYTON

ATTENTION of the country has been occupied during the week by three major considerations: the Borah resolution for an economic and land armament conference, the new crisis in the near east, and alleged atrocities of the Ku Klux Klan in Louisiana.

Perhaps of these Senator Borah's resolution comes home to us with the deepest meaning. Borah has impressed of himself upon the country as the biggest of the Roosevelt school of progressives, and although Senator Johnson is more likely to be remembered in connection with the Borah resolution, it is the Roosevelt characteristics which enabled the Senator of Idaho to change from abruptly without loss of prestige. Borah is the first of the so-called "irreconcilables," who on the progressive side include also Johnson and La Follette, to recognize the impossibility of keeping America aloof from world problems affecting Europe. For this he has been bitterly assailed by his old colleagues of both the progressive and conservative factions.

In his confession of faith, Senator Borah says that which many of us have been contending since the peace conference at Versailles.

"Unless the reparations question is settled, and with it the limitation of armament confirmed and broadened, war is imminent.

"It is an American question and not merely a European one.

"Our prosperity, our safety, our future are all involved. That is why we should meet and settle it."

Borah added the irrefragable observation that "the United States is now more deeply involved in European affairs than ever in its history." One need only to look at Lausanne, at Russia, at American soldiers on the Rhine, to understand how true this is.

One may pass over the grandiloquent speech of Senator Johnson assailing Senator Borah. It contains no new thought. It might have been taken from speeches found in the Congressional Record, made by any one of a dozen irreconcilables during the peace debate on the League of Nations, prior to the elections of 1920.

But we cannot pass so lightly the comment of President Harding in a letter to Senator Lodge, in which the president opposed the Borah resolution "not because of what he aims at, but for diplomatic reasons."

In saying that the Borah resolution suggests the meaning that the executive branch of the government is "not fully able to handle a world situation which is of deep concern to the United States," the president testifies the country that he and Secretary Hughes are averse to the belief which Senator Borah sees.

More significant still is the president's remark that if congress decides to help in the present situation it should "modify the laws which prevent American representation on the reparations commission and prohibit the American debt commission from granting more liberal funding terms to American's world war debtors."

Here, in so many words, the president of the United States tells congress that we must take hold of this reparations situation which is the fundamental thing at the bottom of Europe's chaos. His stand upon it represents a reversal of opinion on his part as abrupt as that in which Senator Borah, at last, but emphatically acknowledges that we most interest ourselves in Europe's economic distress.

And so, while they quarrel over the method, at last we have heading minds in both progressive and conservative camps in the senate coming together upon America's greatest problem.

President Harding says to Senator Borah, however, that his procedure is wrong, and that his resolution would do the future unless it shall await the action of the president in determining whether European countries would enter into such a conference as America's own domestic interest considered, would be able to offer, and here Senator Borah, in the occasion and withdrew his resolution.

Incidentally, a French view has been advanced suggesting that the way out is for America to be represented in the coming economic conference already arranged by European nations. Our government will not be interested in this suggestion, because it has had nothing to do with establishing the scope of that conference. The French suggestion may in part have been inspired by the thought that were we to accept it we would have involved ourselves in a purely economic European conference in which the question of further disarmament, distasteful to French militarists, could not be discussed.

Failure of the Lausanne conference gives the world another war scare. Turkey refuses to consent to international courts to provide justice for foreigners and minorities in Turkish territory, and which are proposed to take the place of pre-war commitments now repudiated by Turkey. England insists that this is the rock upon which the conference splits.

The United States joins England and France in demanding these concessions.

Turkey also refuses to concede to Great Britain oil concessions at Mosul founded on conversations entered into

INDICT CROWELL FOR WAR CAMP FRAUDS

BRITISH DEMAND LOWER REPARATIONS BILL

WILL INSIST ON SETTLING MATTER NOW

To Demand that Germany be Given Two to Four Year Moratorium in Payment

WILL NOT APPROVE FRENCH PLAN FOR RUHR SEIZURE

Declared to Accept Hughes Position as Support of British Stand

LONDON.—By The Associated Press.—Since the adjournment of the allied premiers' meeting here on December 11, there has been a flood of rumors concerning the solution of the deadlock on reparations that prime minister Bonar Law would propose when the allied representatives resumed their discussions in Paris.

Saturday an authoritative statement was issued from official circles saying that the British premier would go to Paris next Monday armed with a plan for a complete settlement of Germany's war obligations.

Immediately after the London breakdown, Downing street hoped the French attitude would change, but the last fortnight had discouraged this hope with the result that Mr. Bonar Law yesterday presented to his cabinet, a plan which it is stated comprises the utmost limit of British concessions.

The British Plan

In its broad principles the plan is said to be as follows:

First—Any reparations program agreed upon in Paris must be a final one which will give an opportunity for the general economic reconstruction of Europe.

Second—A moratorium for Germany is essential for a period of from two to four years in which time Germany must balance her budget, stabilize the mark and undergo general financial reform under allied supervision but not under allied restrictions.

Third—Reduction of the reparations total to approximately 2,500,000,000 pounds which, if not forthcoming after Germany is given a fair chance, will be obtained by an ascending scale of economic penalties.

It is stated that Premier Poincare will probably be surprised to find Mr. Bonar Law in full sympathy with him against German evasion and non-fulfillment of pledges, the only differences of opinion being in the method of obtaining payments, the British being convinced that French plans for control of German production will result in nothing but serious economic upheavals.

Favor Hughes Stand

The speech of Secretary of State Hughes Friday night is taken by the British as full support of their stand and they consider that his statement places France in an isolated position.

The absence of Premier Mussolini will not affect the Paris conference, the British believe.

Inasmuch as the real allied differences lie between the French and the English, the French premier will not be needed, according to the British view, unless a final agreement is reached, when he could be hurriedly summoned to affix his signature.

As leader of the fascist movement, Signor Mussolini attracts popular attention, but it is pointed out that the presence of the Belgian premier, M. Thelouis, is far more essential, for in Paris, Belgium is expected to seize upon every point likely to bring France and Great Britain in accord.

No Hope of U. S. Aid

British officials are unwilling to consider a deadlock at Paris. The allied representatives, they say, must agree for, it is pointed out, there is no hope of assistance from America.

The British debt funding commission is not expected to obtain results which could have a beneficial effect upon the Paris negotiations by January 15, when the temporary moratorium for Germany ends and the original reparations schedule of 1921, involving the payment of 100,000,000 pounds annually, is again effective, not mentioning the exorbitant payments which would bring Germany's present indebtedness to Great Britain along to a total of 158,000,000 pounds.

Should no agreement be reached by January 15, and should Premier Poincare

PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR 1923

"WHO LET YOU IN?" SAYS TURK TO U. S. ENVOY AT LAUSANNE

LAUSANNE.—By The Associated Press.—"I thought the Americans were here simply as observers; I did not know they were having any part in this treaty," was the caustic remark made by Riaz Nur Bey, the second Turkish delegate Saturday in the sub-commission on minorities. This was in the way of retort when the chairman of the sub-commission, Signor Montagna, alluded to the position the Americans took on Friday in presenting a memorandum urging that provision be made so that refugees from Turkey could be enabled to return and reclaim their property there.

BUSINESS HERE GETTING BETTER BIG YEAR AHEAD

Businessmen of La Crosse Optimistic Regarding Outlook After a Successful Year

GRADUAL IMPROVEMENT IS SHOWN IN VARIOUS LINES

Gratifying Situation Revealed in Interview With Local Citizens

AT the close of a prosperous year for La Crosse, business men of this city united yesterday in predicting a continuation of good times for this community and a gradual return to normal business conditions following the readjustment period.

Optimistic and favorable statements were made by business men in various lines of industry yesterday, when asked to review the past year and give their opinions as to what 1923 has in store for La Crosse and the country at large.

Following are interviews with representative business men of the city, representing banking, manufacturing, jobbing and retail houses:

J. J. Feiler, of the E. R. Barron company, and president of the Chamber of Commerce: "Nineteen hundred and twenty-two was most satisfactory. In spite of the difficulties in our manufacturing industries, and labor troubles with the rubber foot wear and decrease in the income of the farmer, business in 1922 was better than many former years. Business conditions for the future look very bright and we are preparing for a large volume of business in 1923."

SEES BIG BUSINESS

A. P. Funk, president and treasurer of the La Crosse Rubber Mills company: "Replying to your request it is my pleasure to give you a brief statement of conditions as indicated to us in the rubber foot wear industry. We sell our product to the retail and jobbing trade in almost all states in the union, and we consider the inquiries and sales in our business a good indication of general business conditions. During the period from July to December of this year, we have had almost 100 per cent normal sales which have come from more concentrated work than has been required in previous years to obtain these results, and I believe in the future business will be gotten more due to such efforts."

CHANDLER HOLDS KEY

G. W. Burton, president of the National Bank of La Crosse: "In the closing of 1922 many people thought we were entering upon a period of large prosperity. This expectation has not as yet been realized. Business has improved in some lines but not in all. The situation in La Crosse is doubtless fairly typical of that in the country generally. A few concerns here are running at capacity. Many concerns are doing better than a year ago, and a few perhaps are nothing little improvement. The fact is that we shall not have general and abundant prosperity until the farmers' situation is remedied. His purchasing power is the real basis for prosperity in this country, and at present it is badly impaired. Sooner or later a cure will be found for the farmers' ills, and when that is done, a business boom will probably follow. We are fortunate in this immediate vicinity in the fact that our farmers are largely dairy men and have not felt the pinch which has closed in on farmers generally who depend upon one crop. Retail business in La Crosse appears to have been good in 1922, and the prospects for 1923 favorable largely owing, I think, to the fact that our farmers are doing reasonably well."

STEADY READJUSTMENT

J. M. Holley, cashier of the State Bank of La Crosse: "Probably the most conspicuous feature of the year ending December 31st, 1922, has been the steady readjustment.

CONSERVATION CLUB OPPOSES WINNESHIEK DRAINAGE PROJECT

Officers of Local Club to Attend Hearing at Prairie du Chien Wednesday

CONSERVATIONISTS AROUSED OVER THE COMMERCIAL PLAN

Would Destroy Best Breeding Ground Along the River

Fighting to save 10,000 acres of swamp land and sloughs regarded as one of the best breeding places for wild game and fish on the upper river, officers of the La Crosse County Conservation club will go to Prairie du Chien Wednesday to appear in opposition to the Winneshiek drainage project with other conservationists of Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota.

Louis Hirschheimer, president and H. E. Schurz, secretary of the local club will appear at the hearing in opposition to the drainage project. L. H. Peacock, noted conservationist of Ames, Iowa, and others will be there to oppose the proposition.

The Winneshiek bottoms, proposed to be drained and converted into farm land, lie between the Soto and Lynxville. For years it has been the greatest duck hunting territory in this vicinity and the sloughs furnish an ideal breeding place for fish and muskies. The conservationists will oppose the drainage project on the ground that it would spoil this great breeding place.

EX-SOLDIER'S BODY FOUND WITH TWO WOUNDS—HELD SLAIN

KENOSHA, Wis.—The body of John Paradis, a former soldier, was found half buried in the sand along the lake shore a mile and a half south of Kenosha, late Saturday. According to relatives he disappeared a week ago after drawing $500 from a bank here.

Investigation revealed that he had been shot through the left eye and just below the heart, which convinced authorities that he had been murdered. In his left hand he crushed a rosary.

WINONA TO HAVE DISTRICT OFFICE OF STATE DRY FORCE

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—District prohibition offices established by S. B. Quale, state prohibition director, under a new prohibition enforcement plan in Minnesota will be opened Tuesday at St. Paul, Duluth, Winona, Fergus Falls, and Mankato. Prohibition agents from the office of M. L. Harney, prohibition enforcement officer will be assigned to take charge of each district.

U. S. AMBASSADOR TO JAPAN COMING BACK TO RESIGN

TOKIO.—By The Associated Press.—Charles B. Warren, United States ambassador to Japan, will sail for America on the President Cleveland January 25, and, after necessary conferences with President Harding and Secretary Hughes, will present his resignation. He announced Saturday.

AND WHO DO YOU SUPPOSE DISABLED GUARDSHIP MOTOR?

NEW YORK.—With the sub-chaser Hansen, "federal dry navy," of the port of New York, tied up at the Battery with engines disabled, the Narrows was left unguarded Saturday night, long enough for fifteen rum runners to slip into port with nearly $7,000,000 worth of liquor for New Year's the police department was advised.

Federal prohibition zone chief, Appleby, was amazed when he learned that the Hansen, flagship of his "dry fleet," was tied up at the pier.

"I thought she was out patrolling the Narrows," he explained.

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF W. R. MONTAGUE COMPANY LAST WEEK

Officers and Salesmen Hold Meeting Thursday and Friday

DISPLAY OF GOODS MADE BY COMPANY ONE OF FEATURES

Dance Thursday Night; Banquet Friday Evening

THE nineteenth annual convention of the W. R. Montague company of La Crosse, which closed Friday night with a banquet and meeting at the Stradford hotel, marked the end of a successful year in the company's history, according to the word of the president, Wallace R. Montague.

The officers of the organization, and all of the salesmen and field representatives were present at the convention which was held on Thursday and Friday. The convention is designed as an annual event at which all of the members of the various departments can get together and "talk shop."

One of the main features of the convention was the display of the goods manufactured by the company which was arranged in one of the rooms on the third floor of the factory. This display of candies, crackers and cookies was said by national experts who attended the convention, to be one of the most comprehensive and complete ever shown. All of the articles shown were arranged just as they appear in the retailer's store and none of them were made especially for the display—all were goods from stock.

The social side of the convention was ably taken care of by the annual ball which was given Thursday evening at Elks' hall by the employees of the company. The details of the dance and the program were in charge of the employees. The names of the dances were clever "take-offs" or the officers and involved the trade names of some of the confections manufactured by the company.

John S. Taylor, of Minneapolis, an instructor in scientific salesmanship, was the principal speaker at the banquet Friday night. He gave an inspiring address on the essentials of success in selling goods, emphasizing the statement that in the long run it is character that counts in salesmanship, as in everything else.

CHARGE DEMOCRATS WITH FILIBUSTER TO BLOCK SUBSIDY BILL

WASHINGTON.—Charges of a filibuster against the administration shipping bill were made Saturday by republican leaders while the senate was debating the annual naval bill. Senators Heflin, Alabama, King, Utah, democrats, and others, had made long speeches on a variety of subjects and administration senators declared the purpose was to prolong the naval bill debate until farm credits legislation had been brought in, shutting out the shipping measure entirely.

FORMER AIDE OF BAKER AND SIX BIG CONTRACTORS ACCUSED OF CONSPIRACY

FARMER ARRESTED FOR SENDING BOMB TO MARSHFIELD MAN

Refuses to Plead When Arraigned and Denies Guilt; Will Not Have Lawyer

DECLARES HE NEVER HAD TROUBLE WITH CHAPMAN

Held With Sixteen-year-old Son as Witness

WISCONSIN RAPIDS, Wis.—James Magnuson, a farmer living about six miles from Marshfield, Wis., was arraigned before Edward N. Pomainville, justice of the peace, Saturday night, charged with the murder of Mrs. James A. Chapman, wife of a Marshfield county commissioner.

Mrs. Chapman was killed and her husband's left arm blown off while they were opening a dynamite bomb, sent them through the mail disguised as a Christmas package.

Refuses to Plead

Magnuson refused to plead, declined to employ a lawyer, asserted his innocence and was remanded to jail until January 4, when the hearing will be continued.

Judge Pomainville asked him if he wished to plead guilty.

"What for?" Magnuson asked.

"To this charge of murder," the justice replied.

"That's a pretty serious charge for an innocent man."

"Do you want a lawyer?"

"No, what for?"

"Then I will have to hold you in jail for four days," the judge said.

"Well, I've got to wait in jail then; that's a long time for an innocent man," the prisoner replied.

During the examination, the farmer denied he had ever had trouble with Chapman. They had never met but twice, he said, once last spring when he went to the commissioner to ask for a rebate on a ditch assessment, and once last fall when he called on Chapman for the same purpose. The commissioner, he said, promised him a rebate last spring, but told him in the fall that he had applied too late.

County officials say Magnuson left the West Virginia coal fields eighteen years ago after some labor trouble and moved to Chicago, where he lived ten or twelve years. He then came to Wisconsin and has been here for five or six years.

His farm and livestock, they found, are practically unencumbered, his only outstanding obligation being a note for $200.

Son Also Held

Magnuson's son, Edward, 16 years old, is being held in jail as a material witness Saturday night, while the district attorney and postal inspectors search their farm in an effort to find clues by which the sending of the bomb can be traced.

The funeral of Mrs. Chapman, who died in a hospital Thursday, was held at the Methodist church here Saturday afternoon. It was one of the largest funerals in the history of Marshfield.

SOUTH DAKOTA FARM LEADER URGES FOUR NEEDS OF FARMERS

ABERDEEN, S. D.—W. S. Hill, president of the South Dakota farm bureau federation, in an address at the biennial banquet to legislators en route to Pierre, given by the Aberdeen Commercial club, cited four things that will aid agriculture. These are:

Reduced freight rates on agricultural products.

Better finances for agriculture.

Co-operative marketing.

Farm organizations.

BURGLAR AND FOUR THIEVES WHIPPED IN DELAWARE JAIL

WILMINGTON, Del.—Five prisoners convicted this week for various crimes were punished at the ancient whipping post in the county workhouse Saturday. Although stripped to the bare back, the prisoners' indignation was not heavy evidently did not suffer much. A negro burglar got 20 lashes, 20 more to be given next Saturday. The rest, convicted of theft, got five strokes each.

DOLLAR-A-YEAR OFFICIALS FACE CRIMINAL TRIALS

Emergency Camp Construction Committee Members Said to Have Made Huge Sums

FIRST GUN IN FEDERAL ATTACK ON WAR GRAFT

Suits Involving Hundreds of Millions Reported Ready

WASHINGTON.—Benedict Crowell, former assistant secretary of war, and six war-time officials of the war department, were charged Saturday in an indictment returned by a special federal grand jury here with conspiracy to defraud the government and with delaying and defeating the administration of law.

The seven defendants were said by the jury to have participated unlawfully in the award of government contracts during the war and after the armistice, involving hundreds of millions of dollars, and in which some of their number had a pecuniary interest.

Big Contractors Named

The others named were: William A. Starrett, New York, engineer and architect, said to have been a member of the firms of Starrett & Van Vleck, and Thompson-Starrett company, Inc., and later associated with the George A. Fuller company, general contractors. He was chairman of the war department's committee on emergency construction.

Morton C. Tuttle, Boston, said to be general manager of the Aberthaw construction company, and formerly a member of emergency construction committee.

Clemens W. Lundoff of Cleveland, said to be vice president and general manager of the Crowell-Lundoff-Little company and general manager of the Cleveland construction company and also a member of the emergency construction committee.

Clair Foster, reported to live in Canada, formerly associated with the Thompson-Starrett and the George A. Fuller companies, and also with the emergency construction committee.

John H. McGibbons, Baltimore and Chicago, said to have represented a bonding company issuing bonds for contractors and associated with the construction committee.

James A. Mears, Boston and Springfield, Mass., former general manager of Fred T. Ley and company, Inc., to whom the first contract for construction of a national army cantonment was awarded. He was secretary to the construction committee.

Others To Follow

The indictment was the first of its kind to be returned as a result of investigations of war frauds cases. Others are expected to follow completion of the presentation of evidence by department of justice agents which is said to be rapidly approaching the stage required for jury consideration.

The indictment recited the names numerous army officers who, it said, were deceived by the defendants, causing great waste of money and unjustifiable profits to the defendants. Officers regularly responsible for the administration of construction work who found themselves out of harmony with the plans of the conspirators, the indictment continues were replaced by others.

Daugherty's First Gun

The indictments are the first big salvo in Attorney General Daugherty's attack on many war-time contractors which the department of justice holds after exhaustive investigation to be fraudulent. Others are expected to follow, and it is estimated that the amounts involved when the attorney general's full program is under way will run into the hundreds of millions of dollars.

The emergency construction committee of the council of national defense, the indictments charge, was used as the vehicle for carrying out the alleged plan. The government charged that the alleged conspirators used their membership on the committee to unlawfully influence other officers of the United States in the plans and policies for carrying out the war-time construction program, to attain the "cost plus" system, to eliminate usual safeguards for the government and to defeat checking up and supervising the contractors.

Plain Crazy

IN adjoining columns Frank H. Simonds paints a gloomy, and we think on the whole a perfectly true portrait of the state of Europe. The last year has seen the "great powers" steadily on the down grade, with economic and social disruption close on their heels, and fiscal disaster just ahead. Greater dangers threaten in 1923. And yet, having envisaged this fearful picture, Mr. Simonds tranquilly relates that France will not abate a jot or tittle of her power to force Germany even in the face of a universally accepted conclusion that Germany cannot possibly pay the reparations demanded of her. Mr. Simonds has in the past well and truly presented the French point of view in the United States, but it seems incredible that this should be a proper impression of French policy and statesmanship. One cannot conceive that France would deliberately hurl Europe into the abyss—herself going down with it—in order to maintain exactly the hold on the whip which was given her by the treaty of Versailles. Either French statesmen are incredibly foolish or Mr. Simonds misconceives their attitude. France has ever had the name of being realistic and clear of head. And this is little short of idiocy.

It is no doubt true, as Mr. Simonds says, that France has put herself in such a position that she faces financial disaster unless Germany pays. But in the same breath he indicates that the French have no notion of giving up the very expensive devices by which they maintain their threat against Germany; that they will cling to them to have some guarantee of recompense from the defeated enemy. But what recompense can be had from Germany so long as most of what she can scrape up goes to pay the expenses of military occupation? And what can France do to save herself so long as all that Germany pays and a great deal more beside goes to pay for the biggest army in the world, for defiant ignoring of the naval disarmament treaty, and such unproductive, dangerous activities? If France is heading toward bankruptcy, it is French statesmanship that is steering. There is none but herself to blame.

One must think that Mr. Simonds is wrong. It is not possible that sane politicians are so bull-headed as this. Wars and international politics are the result of economic factors, of commercial and national self-interest. Nations are not like animals that sometimes will die themselves in order to slay antagonists. France has everything to lose, and practically nothing to gain by sticking to her present position. One cannot believe that were a feasible reparations plan offered by such an economic conference of experts as President Harding proposes, France would refuse to accept it. If she wants guarantees, surely the co-operation of all the powers is better insurance than the empty privilege of occupying the Ruhr valley, in a country industrially dead. Surely some such arrangement, even if payments which France needs are delayed for the life of a moratorium to Germany, is better than another war which, even should France win, would mean billions deeper in debt and thousands of lives lost.

The situation is sufficiently desperate. France must be able to see that attempts to settle it by further trampling militarism and violence will only make it worse.

Clear Gain Anyhow

SIX million and a half is asked by the administration to start the job of bringing thirteen existing war vessels into line with modern naval practice as developed by the lessons of the great war. That is a lot of money, but as the dispatch points out hitherto the United States has always followed the policy of scrapping its obsolete ships and building new ones, to keep the navy in line with the latest developments in fighting craft. To bring thirteen new ships off the ways would require a good many times $6,500,000. It may be true, as charged, that in the naval limitation treaty about all that happened was that the powers agreed not to build any more ships of a sort that had proven to be antiquated and comparatively useless against modern weapons. Yet the fact remains that until all the powers agreed to build no more none of them would have dared scrap existing ships, or stop their building programs. Whatever the naval and military experts may say, the result of the Washington conference was clear gain to the taxpayers. It may not stop wars, true enough; perhaps it does not even make them less probable, though this may be doubted. But it does save money. And that is something that few governments had ever done before.

CHURCH NEWS

Furnished by the Church News Association

Membership growth of all American religious bodies in 1922 reached 380,000, greater by 245,000 than during any twelve months in recent years. Data will hardly be ready in complete form before the end of February next, and all records are not kept on the calendar years, but enough is already known to fix the figures of increase approximately. These increases have been well distributed, except that the small bodies stand still, some of them fall behind, while the large and well known ones, destined it would appear, to live in American affairs, grow with remarkable steadiness. At the end of 1922 there are enrolled on the parish records of American religious bodies 42,130,000. Roman Catholic membership and growth are difficult to act down in exact figures. In this body count is made of baptized persons in all others of actual communicants. Methodists and Baptist bodies run very evenly—8,000,000 each at the end of this year, or very nearly that figure. Within the year Baptists of the South made marked increase; far larger than Baptists of the North. Presbyterians and Lutherans are also quite near together in memberships, Lutherans being ahead with 2,525,000 and Presbyterians 2,305,000. Two bodies, the Disciples and Episcopal, go beyond the 1,000,000, the former with 1,500,000 and the latter 1,143,500, the former standing about even, and the latter increasing in 1922 by 40,000.

The great event in religious affairs, which the year 1922 put forward into the immediate future, is an ambitious venture into the world of hate and war, in efforts to apply Christianity. The first such program to be announced was one supported by the whole Christian world, the Roman Catholic church excepted. This was announced during the summer. Just at the close of the year a similar program, on a slightly different basis, was announced by the Pope in the name of the Roman Catholic church, and as part of his pontifical plans. Both Protestant and Catholic set the year 1923 as the culmination, and both announced work to start immediately, leading up to the date and the event named.

When you go to church, if you do go, you put some money in the plates that are passed. Most everybody else does. Maybe you send checks. A good many do. The total number of actual church members who really give any sums worth mentioning is, however, quite small. It is the few who support the churches, and that few wholly within the membership of the churches. People outside of churches give next to no money to church causes, while people within the churches, give by far the largest parts of all general charitable, educational and other funds for the general good. And these givers within the churches are usually the same generous people who also support the church causes. The foregoing facts have been demonstrated by very careful research. Just before the World War the sums given by American people to carry on the religious business of America, and that part of the world's religious business which America supports, amounted in all bodies to $415,000,000 a year. During the war the figure just held its own. Much money was diverted to war relief. During the past four years, a world filled with unrest, gifts have mounted with astonishing facility. During 1922 the total put on plates, sent in by checks, and otherwise given to carry on religion its material business, was $550,000,000. Some estimate it as more nearly approaching $575,000,000.

Marked progress was made in 1922 toward unity of the churches of the world. A date was fixed for 1925, and Washington selected as the place, for a World Conference on Faith and Order. There have agreed to send delegates to the conference every Christian body in the world, save only the Roman Catholic. Even the ancient Coptic Church of Egypt has named delegates. As showing the American spirit the conference will defray expenses of delegates named by some of these small bodies in far off countries, since they admitted they were without funds to pay expenses themselves.

In the religious world of America that which makes the year 1922 stand out above all other years is the marked growth in the influence wielded by churches. President Harding has taken churches into consideration as no president before him. Such is the verdict of leaders in all bodies. President Harrison, President McKinley, President Roosevelt spoke often at religious conventions, and President Taft served as chairman of the official body of his denomination. But with them it was largely a private matter. This year the influence of churches is a public matter. The Disarmament conference would not have been held, so church leaders say, had not President Harding been assured by churches that Christian people of the nation would stand behind the effort. In the negotiations at Lausanne, at the very end of 1922, the influence of church sentiment from America was strong. Proofs to that effect came out from Washington as well as from Lausanne.

WHAT ABOUT THE CLOSING YEAR?

BY FRANK H. SIMONDS

WASHINGTON.—With the present article we come to the end of one more year, the fourth since the ending of the world war and the ninth since the outbreak of that great struggle the circumstances and consequences of which have dominated all international and national affairs since August 1914. How then shall one sum up this year that has closed? Has it on the whole contributed to settlement and reintegration or continuing chaos and further disintegration?

There can hardly be any large difference of opinion as to the larger aspects of 1922. In it, beyond all debate, international incoherence with resulting economic chaos has continued. On the political side we are patently in a more difficult situation than twelve months ago and the political conditions continue to control the economic.

More than that, in the judgment of many if not most experienced observers, we have reached one of those crises in which the course of events for many years is to be determined.

Either, within a time measured at most by a few months there must be very great and unmistakable improvement or there will be a collapse accompanied by political and economic disturbances which will retard if they do not for long definitely postpone all recovery. At the turn of the year we are facing the possibility of something approximating a general European collapse the consequences of which are really too disastrous to be wisely forecast.

Looking backward for a moment over the year, it was in the closing days of the Washington conference. The highest hopes of this first American conference had already been shattered. The resumption beside the Potomac of the quarrels between the British and the French which had been carried on beside the Thames and the Seine for nearly three years and the emergence of the submarine controversy had already foreshadowed the failure of the American conference to go beyond the minimum of limitation of naval armaments comprehended in avoidance of Anglo-American-Japanese competition in naval construction of capital units and the accommodation of Japanese-American rivalries in the Pacific.

Today, the failure of France and Italy to ratify even the limited program of restriction has led to the frank fear that all that was done in Washington may prove abortive. Mr. Hughes' fatal error in permitting himself to seem to become associated with a British program of European domination, his apparent partnership with Britain in fixing French naval strength in accordance with British views and without sympathetic consideration of French views has so far prevented French ratification of the Washington agreements and leaves it for a year to determine whether ratification can be had even eventually.

Washington, moreover, proved the point of departure for a new Anglo-French campaign. Defeated here in their effort to establish French views and stung by the obvious British success in diminishing French prestige and shattering American friendship for France, the French statesmen and the French people have reacted in a series of counter-offensives which have been disastrous for the world. Washington was fondly hoped to be the beginning of a new era in international relations. It was believed in America at least that there had been success, but in reality, whatever its superficial achievements in the direction of international amity, these were instantly obscured by the Franco-British quarrel and once more an international gathering dedicated to the cause of peace proved to be the point of departure for new international disaster.

From Washington the attention of the world shifted promptly to Cannes and at Cannes M. Briand, while still in the process of negotiating with Lloyd George, was struck down from behind by a majority of the French parliament, bitterly and vehemently resenting British success and tactics at Washington and looking with undisguised apprehension at the apparent menace to French interests involved in Briand's acquiescence in the Lloyd George policies.

The fall of Briand brought M. Poincaré to the front and with his arrival it was patent there would be a new chapter in Anglo-French relations. The former president of the republic was obviously called to power because he exemplified to the French mind resistance to a British—and American idea of making a new settlement with Germany based solely upon economic considerations and to the French mind aiming at the sacrifice of French claims for reparations to Anglo-Americans needs for trade.

The conference in Boulogne, the first meeting between Lloyd George and Poincaré, foreshadowed what was to happen. While on the surface peace was preserved, in reality the doom of the Genoa conference already agreed upon at Cannes was written. Failure of the French and British prime ministers to reach any basis of agreement was the certain promise of the failure of Genoa.

To Genoa Lloyd George went, still in the fullness of his international power, the greatest figure which had played upon the European stage since Bismarck. He went with deliberate purpose to restore peace in Europe on British terms, to establish a coalition of nations in which Russia and Germany would be partners, to isolate France and backed as he hoped by the active approval of America and the visible support of most of Europe, to bring France to heel.

Unhappily for George the prelude to Genoa was the Rapallo agreement between Russia and Germany, which had been preceded by the American refusal to attend the conference and the plain American intimation that it looked with frank disapprobation upon the British flirtation with the Bolsheviks. Finally the absence of Poincaré deprived Lloyd George of the opportunity to come to close quarters with the foe he rightly recognized to be most dangerous.

The Rapallo agreement threw all the central European states into the arms of France and cemented the bonds which had already been drawn between the Little Entente, Poland and the French and Belgians. In a word all the states adjoining Germany or Russia, or menaced by a Russo-German combination turned for aid to the one country whose military strength and assured policy blocked both Russian and German ascendancy and sought the perpetuation of the system created at Versailles.

In vain Lloyd George struggled to overcome the effects of American absence and Russo-German alliance. In vain he sought to oppose alliances and the old fashioned grouping of powers which had been produced by the Rapallo arrangement. In the face of an imminent and deadly peril Europe returned to its traditional methods and as consequence the conception of a Europe of nations united by common membership in a single association rather than divided into hostile groups perished.

Genoa, as I see it, was the real termination of the Wilson adventure in Europe. The American president had retired from office and from influence, his country had long ago repudiated his policies as expressed at Versailles, had seized George, had seized the principles and the power of his transatlantic colleague and had for two more years striven to bend Europe to an Anglo-Saxon conception. Adjourned to The Hague, Genoa ended in obscurity, an idea and the political fortunes of the most conspicuous public man in the world had both come to ultimate grief.

After Genoa the old question of German reparations rose again and the spectre of military operations against Germany was seen once more. But again the peril was postponed by one more compromise which adjourned without solving any crisis, Belgium having at priority upon the remaining payments of Germany until January 15, consented to take German promises and paper and France not immediately concerned, agreed to a postponement, not technically described as a moratorium, until the later date when French interests would be directly concerned.

Then there came the sudden and terrible Greek debacle. Greece, the soldier of Britain, led into Asia Minor as a consequence of the British desire to forestall Italian occupation of Smyrna and replace Turkish by Greek influence in the near east and supported by British promises but not by British power, after a two years' campaign abruptly collapsed. The victorious Turkish armies came flowing back to the straits and demanded access to Europe.

In the supreme crisis Britain was left alone holding insecurely with an inadequate force the Asiatic shore of the Dardanelles at Chanak, while French and Italian troops were withdrawn and Rumanian and Jugo-Slav troops refused to march. For many days the question of peace or war hung in the balance. Peace was actually preserved by the intervention of France, through Franklin Bouillon, the French politician who had negotiated a treaty for his own country with the Ankara government.

But this peace was only achieved by a surrender, reluctant on the part of Britain, satisfied on the part of France and Italy, of all the lands in Europe and in Asia Minor, which had been held by the Turk at the outbreak of the world war, Adrianople as well as Smyrna passed to the Ottoman. Nothing was achieved by British opposition save a brief delay during which hundreds of thousands of Asiatic and European Christians dwelling in lands returned to the Turk and taking natural alarm as a consequence of the burning of Smyrna fled before the approach of a restored Turkish master.

The near eastern crisis finished Lloyd George. Britain justly holding him responsible for risking a war that his fellow countrymen were to fight, perceiving with dismay that a single year had served to bring British prestige and influence on the continent to its lowest point in many decades and discovering at last the extent to which the Lloyd George method of intrigue and press manipulation, never more clearly disclosed than at Washington during the conference, had revived all the old legends of British bad faith, abruptly ended the rule of the last of the great figures which had made war and dominated the construction of so-called peace.

While the conference of Lausanne, which has not yet adjourned as I write, sought to find some face-saving formula for covering the most complete and humiliating surrender of the Christian to the Mohammedan world in several centuries and to disguise its abandonment of hundreds of thousands of Asiatic and European Christians, by a gallant and vociferous struggle to vindicate the principle of the freedom of the straits, a new British ministry undertook painfully to take up the tangled strings of international relations.

For this new ministry, however, the problem of immediate importance was posed by Germany. For an entire year Germany had been in political chaos and economic disintegration. Inflation, eagerly embraced as a means of escaping reparations payments, had now reached a point where it was beyond the control of any or all Germans. No longer could there be any serious debate over immediate German reparations payments, the question had become one of how Germany was to be saved from a complete collapse, brought on not by any excessive reparations payments, but by the fatal method of evasion which had been adopted.

As the year ends this is the single and supreme problem. But although four years have passed since it was originally raised, we have made little real progress, toward solution because the interests of those who are directly engaged are diametrically opposite. For four years the interest of the British and ourselves has lain in the restoration of the German market for our products, for four years the salvation of France has lain in the collection of the costs of reconstruction of the devastated area.

Today France demands that she shall be assured against bankruptcy at home as the first condition of the salvation of Germany, while the Anglo-Saxon countries demand that France shall permit German salvage, with no formal guarantee of German payment after German rescue. In the course of four years there has been a necessary and wholesome deflation of the reparations expectations, originally expanded not as many Americans believe by French cupidity, but by the necessity of Lloyd George to make good his pledges of December, 1918. There is common agreement that Germany can pay no more than $10-$12,000,000,000. There is, too, common agreement that she can now pay nothing and can only resume payments when she has been allowed the time to restore her whole fiscal and economic situation, wrecked not by reparations payments, but by the method of evasion employed to escape payments.

But France is as certain to sink into fiscal bankruptcy as Germany into economic ruin, if there be not some guarantee not alone that a restored Germany will pay, but that during the German moratorium, some method of international loan shall be found by which France can raise money on her legitimate German expectations and avoid bankruptcy; moreover this bankruptcy must come if she does not find external relief for the present intolerable burden of financing restoration in the devastated area, a process which has already cost France as much as the world now believes Germany can pay as a total of reparations.

The debate has then narrowed down to the single issue. The British and American governments speaking for the proper self interests of their respective countries demand that Germany shall have a respite during which she shall be able to restore her own shaken economic and financial edifice and make ready to begin payments upon a reparations account reduced to those figures which the rest of the world believe to be possible and therefore proper. The French, on the other side, largely supported by the Belgians, the two states which have the largest legitimate claims against Germany growing out of wanton German destructions, demand that since Germany had faith is undeniable and there is no guarantee of German performance after moratorium to be had from those British and American statesmen who favor the moratorium, France shall be permitted to take productive guarantees against eventual payment. In other words the French ask to seize the most valuable economic regions in Germany as a cage of ultimate German payment.

Such French action, necessarily military, is opposed now as it was in the Paris conference and has been ever since by both British and American public opinion because it is justly recognized that such occupation might and probably would precipitate disturbances which would deprive the moratorium of all value and actually lead not to the salvaging but to the destruction of Germany. Since this destruction would be materially disastrous both for the British and the Americans we both argue that it would be a moral crime.

But the French now as at Paris, argue with equal vehemence and with quite as much reference to the imminent justice of things, that since France would be ruined if Germany does not eventually pay and if moratorium is not immediately forthcoming upon this amount and since the rest of the world is neither ready to advance money nor underwrite eventual German performance the Anglo-American proposal amounts to a desire to save Germany at the expense of France.

So far the debate has advanced in the present year. On January 2 the British and French statesmen will meet in Paris to continue the London negotiations which recently came to nothing. On January 15, Germany, now obviously unable to make payments due will have to default and such default arising out of undeniable German evasion will leave France with the technical right to resort to force which means to extend her military occupation.

Meantime the closing fortnight of the month has seen the public opinion of the United States again excited over the European problem. Clemenceau's visit, the London conference, the visible decay of Germany and the patent approach of catastrophe with evil consequences here, have combined to set afloat a new tide of discussion and to launch fresh reports of American intervention.

Yet these reports have been promptly denied as a consequence of the general recognition in high places of the fact that America can do nothing without doing more than any American administration cares to do in the presence of a censorious congress and a suspicious people. American assistance to Europe, it is euphemistically called, (in reality what is at stake is the American market in Europe and what the American administration must seek is the protection and expansion of this market) must take the form of some very specific and definite involvement.

Germany can now only be saved if she is protected against French occupation, but since Germany has given France a legitimate claim against her since she has deliberately sought to evade payment of this claim and since France cannot be saved herself unless the claim is paid, the single road to peace in Europe is the discovery of some method of separating the French from the Germans of insuring German payment and thus of forestalling French action.

So far neither Great Britain nor the United States although British vision is in advance of ours, has been ready to assume the responsibility and has as a result had recourse to moral arguments to obtain material results. We have weighed against French militarism and championed German salvation in the name of humanitarian considerations. But the result has been no more than a deadlock for the French have seen the material profits for the British and ourselves resulting from German salvation and have not unnaturally set down our invocation of humanitarian considerations as no more than characteristic Anglo-Saxon hypocrisy.

As long as we in the United States continue to look at the European question as purely and simply the question of saving Europe, we shall quite logically and naturally insist upon the right to impose the conditions with which Europe must comply before we intervene, if we intervene at all. But Europe, on its side, satisfied that the single reason which might provoke intervention is material, in a word that our interest is material not moral, is not by any means ready to comply with our conditions, arguing that if collapse takes place, some considerable share of the costs will be assessed against the American producers of commodities normally exported to Europe.

As I see it, the fatal difficulty lies in the fact that we demand as a condition antecedent to our doing anything, that Europe shall do things which she will only do after we have made certain clear contributions. There is the deadlock between America and Europe and between England and the continent which has so far prevented solution and may in the end insure ruin.

Lloyd George's policy was one of avoiding material contributions by recourse to moral extortion. He sought to coerce the French by the threat of British withdrawal from the entente and by the pressure of British public opinion. American tactics have been on the whole much the same. We urge France to permit German salvaging because refusal will weaken French causes in the United States and alienate America from France for the long and obscure future. This is our position today and roughly speaking it has been our position ever since Mr. Wilson disappeared.

But it has not worked. It cannot work and in my judgment permanent insistence upon it by us and by the British will insure the downfall of Europe. France in particular and the continent of Europe in general is not going to take Anglo-Saxon intervention as purely and simply a moral and humanitarian affair and accepting it at our valuation comply with our conditions. If it evades payment and invites French coercion as a consequence, that it will be saved nevertheless because Anglo-Saxon self interest is engaged. France believes that our efforts to save Europe are no more than the revelation of our concern for our trade.

When Senator Borah declaims the conditions Europe must meet before America acts Europe smiles even in its misery, because it knows that if it could comply with those conditions not only would it be safe itself but it would offer America and Britain a field that could be imagined. But the simple truth is that Germany will only pay under compulsion and France will resign neither the right nor the power to coerce. Exercise of this right and preservation of this power may wreck Europe, but the failure of Germany to pay will ruin France.

Thus as the year ends the situation with respect of the eternal triangle, Germany-France and the two Anglo-Saxon countries discloses twelve months of dangerous developments and a future darkened by terrible and imminent possibilities. In this period of the recent past Germany has sunk, Europe has disintegrated, externally this disintegration has been disclosed in the Turkish episode where all western Europe, Great Britain, France and Italy frankly surrendered to the will of a state itself bankrupt and in the last stages of ruin mustering hardly more than 150,000 troops and incapable of any large or sustained effort.

Internally the decay and disintegration is revealed in the proximity of fiscal bankruptcy in France, economic collapse in Germany and a permanent army of nearly a million and a half of unemployed in Britain. On many sides and from not a few experienced and conservative commentators one hears forecasts of a complete European debacle. Moreover the picture is completed by the manifest determination of the United States to do nothing until Europe complies with conditions which are so unlikely to be complied with that the demand not only provokes despair but arouses resentment.

In any event, looking back over the year thus briefly it is clear that it has been a period of disappointment, disintegration, and that if it has just missed ending in supreme disaster, the continuing danger is the dominating circumstance in the year that is now opening.

GOVERNOR'S GUARDS REMODEL ARMORY; PAINTING BY LOCAL ARTIST FEATURES DECORATIONS

Panel depicting "Victory Triumphant", painted by Leighton N. Oyen, part of decorations of newly remodeled Armory hall.

One of the main features of the decorations in the newly remodeled and redecorated Armory hall of the Governor's Guards association is the panel painted by Leighton N. Oyen, La Crosse artist, depicting victory triumphant after the two recent struggles in which United States was involved—the Spanish-American war and the World war. The panel, which is 6 by 17 feet, is beautifully executed and occupies a prominent space on the wall opposite the main entrance. In the background, on one side, are figures representing the fighters of the Spanish-American period, and on the other side the figures are those of soldiers of the World war. Members of the Guards fought in both of these wars.

The decorations of the hall are designed after the manner of the ancient Romans who commemorated the conquests of their legions. Shields, golden eagles, battle axes and the emblems of military decoration are emblazoned on the walls by the artist in gay colors to produce a festive atmosphere of victory and rejoicing. The central figures of the main panel are intended to represent Enlightenment, Peace and Victory. The globe at the left of the panel is suggestive of the late war which involved the whole world, and the prow which appears on the right is that of a Spanish galleon representing the Kingdom of Spain in the Spanish-American war. The entire hall has been remodeled and redecorated by the Association as a memorial to those members who served during the late war. The partitions at the end have been removed, which almost doubles the floor space, and the orchestra stand has been enlarged making it comfortably large enough even for a band. Each of the large windows on the side has been named as a memorial to one of the engagements which Company "B" of which the association has been formed, took part. On the north side of the hall these windows have been named for the engagements in France, and on the south side, the which the company participated in, sectors fought over by Company "B" during the Spanish war.

The present floor space of the hall is 50 by 100 feet, which makes it one of the largest floors in the city. It is planned to hold frequent dances in the hall, and the association will also conduct a roller skating rink there during the winter months. Besides housing the Governor's Guards association, the hall is also used as a meeting and drill place for the Me-

YES CHIROPRACTIC CAN HELP YOU!

CHIROPRACTIC is fast becoming America's favorite mode of healing. Millions are daily taking adjustments—and few are the diseases that do not respond to its application.

Go where you will these facts are in evidence. Ask those who have tried straight Chiropractic adjustments and they will tell you all this and more.

To some these statements may seem overdrawn—but we are living in an age of rapid change and stupendous achievement in which it behooves us not to scoff at that which we do not understand.

The accompanying picture is that of the panel painted by Leighton N. Oyen whose crayon portrait studies attracted so much desirable attention at the last art exhibit held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms here.

Mr. Oyen is a member of the Association and saw active service on five fronts with the 32nd Division during the World war. It was during his period of service that he became imbued with the ideas which he has recently placed on canvas. The scene of the World war battle is drawn from what he actually saw and experienced while in France.

"THE RED WIDOW"
One of the season's biggest musical hits that will appear in this city will be the new version of "The Red Widow," which will be the attraction at the La Crosse theater on New Year's day for matinee and night.

This big musical comedy success, comes direct from its metropolitan run with the original cast of fifty musical comedy favorites intact. Heading this large company is George Damerall, the original prince in the "Merry Widow," that famous attraction that was the talk of the country a few years ago in addition to Mr. Damerall, and playing the stellar role of "The Red Widow" is Myrtle Vail, America's favorite comedienne. The book is by Channing Pollock and Renold Wolff, which is an absolute guarantee of its success. The comedy is in three acts and four scenes, and is a riot of laughter, songs and terpsichorean revelries from the start to finish. The settings are magnificent, especially the winter palace scene in the third act.

"The Red Widow" is a musical show that makes the audience laugh uproariously at the funny situations of George Damerall in the role of Ciccio Hannibal Butts, an American in the land of the anarchists; his attempts to pass Anna Verara, the "Red Widow" and a leader of the Russian anarchists, as his wife, with his real wife appearing on the scene, is a scream that will strain the sides and bring a catch to the throat and tears to the eye. The music and lyrics of the "Red Widow" are by Charles J. Gebeart, the well known writer of things musical.

THINGS MUSICAL

By H. MARGARET JOSTEN

The Chamber of Commerce Hall was crowded to the doors on Friday afternoon.

Modern Scandinavian Music Presented

Mrs. Clem Knothe presented a program of modern Scandinavian music, having allowed the club members the privilege of inviting guests. Mrs. Livingston had taken advantage of the presence in La Crosse of her brother, Mr. Glen Hallik, thus being able to give people the unusual pleasure of hearing two trios for violin, cello and piano, a string quartet and a violin concerto.

Besides this Mr. Hallik's analytical comments upon various numbers were of inestimable value to listeners who were hearing these compositions for the first time.

Another portion of the program that was strikingly interesting, was Dr. Otten's reading of a Bjornson poem with incidental music by Grieg, played by Miss Louise Knudson. Two groups of songs were given, the first, very modern little pictures most artistically presented by Mr. E. O. Forsell, the second, delicately fanciful both in composition and in Miss MacDonald's rendition of them. The concluding number, the Farmer's Calendar, given by Miss Harrison, Miss Gerling, Mrs. Whippley and Mrs. Watkins, was a tiny scrap of a thing both attractive and amusing and ended the program with a chuckle.

The younger musicians who had places on the program and did both themselves and their teacher, Miss Ida Schuman great credit, were Lillian Haugen, Hubert Schleiter and Gertrude Salzer. The full program is printed at the end of this column.

Many, many children from little tots with tiny piping voices to boys and girls in their teens, all white robed in choir vestments, singing in unison chorals—the sight and sound of it was in a way more stirring than any professional musician could be. Those children of the Sunday school of Our Saviour's Lutheran church who under the Reverend Magelsen's direction sang one night this week to their parents and friends, seemed so thoroughly to enjoy it.

One after another of the old chorals they sang, chorals hundreds of years old and of imperishable beauty—that is their beauty—is imperishable so long as the children of the successive generations learn them and love them as these children do.

One cannot believe that Pastor Magelsen ever taught the beauty of Christianity more truly or more convincingly than when he led these children in singing Now Sing Now Rejoice We, or Praise to the Lord, the Almighty King of Creation. The young voices did so thoroughly praise the Lord and rejoice that they made glad the hearts of the listeners.

An excellent trio of musicians will give the incidental music of the Book of Job which appears at the La Crosse theater early in January. The music is so vital a part of this production that the quality of the musicianship is as essential as is the art of the actors.

This trio is composed of Jean Orloff, violinist; Lenora Coffin, pianist; and Genevieve Hughe, violinist.

Recognition has been won everywhere for their serious work and perfect ensemble. There is always a feeling of sound musicianship behind their work and an atmosphere of freshness, of spontaneity and joy in their work which pervades all they do.

Jean Orloff, though a descendant of the royal house of Russia, is a loyal American, and comes by her musical heritage very logically. Her early training was received in the Cincinnati College of Music under the instruction of Signor Campanari. Being awarded a gold medal of the college for violin she became a pupil of the great Wilhelm in London.

Lenora Coffin, the pianist of the organization, comes from a family long associated with the fine arts in the middle west. After years of study in New York, Mrs. Coffin went to Paris and for two years under Wagner Swaine studied there, after which her dream was realized and she was admitted into the class of Leschitzky in Vienna where she remained for several years.

Genevieve Hughe is an Indiana girl with an ancestry of Holland. When six years old she played the piano and if the cello had not been her chosen instrument, would have been equally proficient as a pianist. At the age of seventeen Miss Hughe attended the New England Conservatory and since that time the offer of a complete scholarship is open to her whenever she wishes to accept it.

These artists have each won some individual distinction but as they appear in this trio they have a splendid unity of thought and ideal which is admirable.

The Letz quartet which plays at the La Crosse Normal school in January, has given only one New York concert this season, and that about a week ago. The comment of the press on this appearance was concise. It was, "The Letz gentlemen played better than ever before."

TCHITCHERIN ASKS FOR RECOGNITION BY THE UNITED STATES

Couples Olive Branch With Few Brickbats For Allies at Lausanne

MEANWHILE CONFERENCE HANGS ON RAGGED EDGE

Some Sign of Hope in Turk Agreement to Talk Over Mosul

LAUSANNE.—By The Associated Press.—M. Tchitcherine, Russian Soviet foreign minister, made an appeal for recognition of the Soviet federation, Saturday, in a statement to the Associated Press.

"The Soviet republic," he said, "earnestly hopes that the beginning of the new year will bring us into closer collaboration with the American people for productive work and for the opening of our natural resources to mankind.

"Our most earnest desire is universal naval disarmament, as well as disarmament on land, peace and productive work. The Soviet republic is strong enough to resist aggression, but we must regret that the scheme which has prevailed at Lausanne will compel us to arm and fortify our south coast and will divert us from our fundamental aim—production."

Tract for Delegates

The entire Soviet delegation delivered a New Year's sermon to the powers, taking as a text "Russia's Sympathy for Oppressed Peoples." M. Tchitcherine distributed to all the delegates a memorandum declaring that a solution of the near east problem is possible only by abandonment of the policy of conquest and intervention toward Turkey. Happily, the Soviets' advent to power in Russia had saved Turkey from total disintegration. Unhappily, however, at Lausanne, according to the memorandum, the great powers continue their old policy of domination and expansion and seek to settle the straits problem so that it can be used as a basis of attack against the Black sea countries.

The memorandum, which takes sides with Turkey in her struggle for sovereign freedom and insists that imperialist nations must cease to consider Moslems as inferiors, in behalf of the Moscow government, M. Tchitcherine recommends the calling of a special conference to examine into the status of the minorities of all countries and declares that the only way to establish peace in the valley of the Danube and in the Balkans is the formation of a confederation by the peoples of those regions, each state retaining its autonomy.

No Change

Saturday's developments brought no appreciable change in the delicate position of the Lausanne conference. Optimists found hope in the fact that the Turks have agreed to meet the British experts and discuss the Mosul frontier, and in the announcement that further progress had been made in the solution of the straits problem. But it is generally admitted that no change for the better or the worse can come until Ismet Pasha has heard from Ankara and until the trend of the Paris reparations conference can be noted.

care give the word for his troops to enter the Ruhr district. Great Britain would not be likely to protest against this action, but would probably retire to a position of isolation and prepare to combat the chaotic economic conditions on the continent which she believes would be certain to follow coercive action against Germany.

Italy Against Invasion

ROME.—By The Associated Press.—Premier Mussolini says the German Embassy has instructed Marquis della Torretta, who is to head the Italian delegation at the Paris reparations conference, as follows:

First.—To adopt the line taken in the memorandum presented by Premier Mussolini at the London conference.

Second.—Italy is not to participate in the occupation of territory in Germany.

Third.—To defend the plan of economic sanctions.

MISS LOTT BENNETT

Mrs. L. C. Jenkins received word on Saturday of the death Saturday morning at Helena, Mont., of Miss Lotta Bennett, formerly a resident of La Crosse. Miss Bennett, who was a dressmaker, left La Crosse for Helena about two years ago. Her death followed an operation, according to word to local friends.

BIG BADGER PAPER COMPANY MULTIPLIES ITS STOCK BY FOUR

STEVENS POINT, Wis.—The Consolidated Water Power and Paper Company, having offices at Wisconsin Rapids and mills at Stevens Point, Wisconsin Rapids, Biron, Appleton, and in Canada, has just announced the cutting of a $4,800,000 "melon."

The stockholders, at a meeting at Wisconsin Rapids voted to increase the capital stock from $1,800,000 to $6,600,000 and to distribute the new shares as a stock dividend. Each stockholder gets three new shares for one of the old, or four shares in all. If effect the consolidated capitalizes $1,800,000 of the profits and distributes them to stockholders in stock instead of cash, the old stock recently has paid dividends of six per cent quarterly.

HIBBING WOMEN DEMAND COUNCIL STEM LIQUOR FLOW

Mayor Promises Housecleaning After Visitors Threaten to See Governor

HIBBING, Minn.—Delegations from the W. C. T. U. and Woman's Community council, appearing before the village council Saturday afternoon, informed the members that unless violation of liquor laws in Hibbing were stamped out, they would appeal to the governor for relief. The women asked the council to go on record as favoring the impeachment of Judge Thomas Brady, of the municipal court, whom they allege was not competent in his office and who was not severe enough against liquor law violators.

Mayor Cannon, in behalf of the council, stated that this was a matter entirely up to the governor. He promised that the city would start a housecleaning.

YOUNG MEN'S CLUB HOLDS REUNION ON THURSDAY EVENING

It was a happy crowd of young men that gathered at the home of Don Carleton, 503 Cass street, Thursday night to talk over the things that had happened during the past few years and to look back to the days of their childhood. The occasion was the first meeting of the Young Men's club, organized by a group of neighborhood boys on the north side in 1904. It was the first meeting of the club held since 1910, and many things have happened in the intervening time. Many of the members of the club have wandered far from La Crosse to pursue their various vocations, but at this particular time most of them were here for the holidays.

It was planned at the meeting to hold an annual get-together between Christmas and New Year's at a time when most of the members will be in town.

These present Friday night were Charles Bonville, Ray Hagdorn, Roger Lueck, Earl Winkler, Wilfred Elgie, Walter Baum, George Baum, Crawford Ingham and Don Carleton. The only members of the original club not present were Melvin Pierce and Robert Knutson. They did not return to the city for the holidays.

FIRE IN BOARDWALK RESORT DOES FOURTH OF MILLION DAMAGE

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—Fire caused a quarter of a million dollars damage on the boardwalk Saturday. Three persons were reported missing and three firemen were slightly injured. Four girls, cabaret singers, were carried down ladders to safety.

The interiors of the Moulin Rouge cafe and Hugo's beauty shop were destroyed by the interior of the Hotel Stouss and that of the Orchard Shoe Salon were badly damaged. The Bal Tabarin cafe was damaged by water.

PRINTS ON AXE TRACE MURDER TO VICTIM'S LANDLORD

SUPERIOR, Wis.—That the blood-crusted finger prints on the handle of the eight-point sledge hammer and hatchet with which Nicholas Trif, 41, Austrian laborer, was brutally slain at Allouez, Thursday afternoon, are those of Jacob Vasil, 29, in whose residence the deed was committed, and who is being held as a suspect by the police, was announced by Robert E. Donaldson, Berillon expert for the Duluth police department Saturday.

HARLAN PAGE TO STAY AT BUTLER FOR FIVE YEARS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Harlan Orville (Pat) Page Saturday signed a contract to continue as director of athletics at Butler college here for the next five years, the board of trustees announced Saturday night.

FALL REFUSES TALK OF RESIGNATION

WASHINGTON.—Secretary Fall of the department of the interior, returning from Virginia, where he spent the Christmas holidays with his daughter, declined to make any statement on published reports that he contemplated resigning. When Mr. Fall accepted the portfolio it was generally understood he did not contemplate serving throughout the entire administration but his friends have stated that he had no immediate intention of resigning.

CABINET DIVIDED OVER RIVAL BILLS FOR FARM CREDIT

Hoover and Wallace For Lenroot Bill, Mellon For Capper Scheme

WASHINGTON.—The endorsement and support of the treasury department was given Saturday to the Capper agricultural credits bill as against its principal rival, the Anderson-Lenroot credits measure, which recently was introduced in the senate and house with the backing of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and other government officials.

Secretary Mellon, in testimony presented at closing hearings of the senate banking committee on farm credits legislation and in a letter sent to Senator McLean of Connecticut, the committee chairman, supported the Capper bill with an amendment to extend for nine months after next June 30 the farm loan powers of the war finance corporation.

Lenroot Bill Favors Farmer

Support was given the Anderson-Lenroot bill by Secretaries Wallace and Hoover. Secretary Wallace was understood to have urged the committee to report the Anderson-Lenroot bill on the ground that it was more nearly adequate to the needs of the farmer than the Capper bill. The Anderson-Lenroot measure would set up farm credits departments in the existing federal land banks with an authorized government-furnished capitalization of $60,000,000 for the twelve banks.

With the views of the three cabinet members before it, the committee prepared to draft legislation which will harmonize the widely conflicting opinions as to the form of aid to be extended the farmers and livestock growers of the country. The committee will meet Tuesday to begin its difficult task.

The Capper bill would provide for organization, under supervision of the controller of the currency, of private rural credit and rediscount corporations with a minimum capitalization of $250,000, for extension of the period during which agricultural paper shall be eligible for rediscount from six months to nine months and for acceptance by federal reserve banks of paper of co-operative associations of agriculturists for rediscount as agricultural paper.

Mellon Fears U. S. Banking

Secretary Mellon presented a number of objections to the Anderson-Lenroot bill, declaring that "it would place the government to a large extent in the commercial banking business. . . . It would make heavy demands upon the treasury for the capital of the farm credits department and that would mean either more government borrowing or higher taxes on all the people," and would provide for issuance of tax exempt collateral trust bonds to raise necessary funds.

Amplifying his last objection, Mr. Mellon said "it would come with particularly bad grace . . . for the federal government to authorize creation of a large volume of new tax exempt securities, at the time it was seeking to shut off the flow of such securities through amendment of the federal constitution."

RETIRING JUDGE PROMISES HIMSELF LONG-DELAYED SPREE

That's What His Long Words Seem to Indicate as Iowa Jurist Winds up Term

DES MOINES, Iowa.—James C. Hume, who retires as judge of the Polk county district court Sunday night, sang a swan song Saturday, which becomes a part of the court record, in which he promised himself a New Year celebration that "may be evasive of the spirit of the eighteenth amendment," and "probably offensive to Mr. Toogood of our town."

The judicial good-bye was in the form of a preface to his opinion in the last case decided in Hume's court. "The writer's two-year term of office," Hume asserts, "expires Sunday. Preparations are about completed and Sunday night when the court house clock strikes the witching hour, certain suppressed desires, not Freudian ones, but one suppressed for the last two years out of deference to the kind of county Iowa judges have to wear, will be suppressed no longer.

"The celebration which the court has in mind may be evasive of the spirit of the eighteenth amendment, if not of the spirit of the framers of our constitution, and probably offensive to Mr. Toogood of our town, but it will be refreshing after two years of self-respect."

BANDITS RAID THREE PROVISION STORES IN MINNEAPOLIS

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—Bandits staged a series of holdups here Saturday night.

Ten customers, including three women stood with hands in the air while robbers took $100 from the cash register at the Gandrup grocery. Nothing was taken from the customers.

Two negro bandits held up Morris Hestrim in his grocery. They bound with rope Hestrim and Mrs. Boris Hestrim, his daughter-in-law, and dragged them into a cellar, took a $350 diamond ring from Mrs. Hestrim and $260 in cash from the store.

Forty-eight dollars was obtained from two holdups at the Al Rosenberg butcher store.

Serious burns are more frequently caused by direct than by alternating currents.

The United States lost two billion dollars by strikes in 1921.

CLEVELAND BUYS BREWER CATCHER IN $50,000 DEAL

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—Glenn Myatt, hard hitting catcher of the Milwaukee club of the American association, Saturday was sold to the Cleveland club of the American league, according to Otto Borchert, owner of the local team.

The deal whereby Myatt becomes the property of the Indians, is said to be the largest ever made by an American association club. He goes to the big league for five players and a money consideration not made public.

The deal is reported to involve $50,000 in cash and players. Milwaukee will get Pitcher Nelson Poff, Catcher Enoch Slaughter, Outfielder Patrick McNulty, Pitcher Fred Lindsey and another pitcher to be turned over to Milwaukee by April 12.

FORTY RAILROADS MAKE OVER SIX PER CENT REPORT OF THE I. C. C.

WASHINGTON.—By the Associated Press.—Approximately forty railroads in the United States have earned more than the six per cent fair return set by the transportation act, the interstate commerce commission reported to the senate Saturday, in response to a resolution by Senator Capper, republican, Kansas. Estimates of the amount which may be due the United States as a result are now being worked out.

None of the railroads whose returns may have been above the six per cent limit, the commission said, has as yet paid anything to the government. Determination of the precise amount due, it was added, must await conclusion of the work of valuing railroad property.

In 1934. This is one of the world's richest oil sections. Turkey insists that no agreement ever was reached, the conversations having been interrupted by the war. England holds the opposite view. Turkey maneuvers to make the world believe that England's greed for the oil fields is the rock upon which peace is splitting.

The fact seems to be that there are two rocks. But America's stand relates to justice rather than to oil, and to the open door to the Black Sea for all nations.

Russia, in some measure backing the Turk, makes a special appeal to America in behalf of its own big contention. It wants the straits open to the merchant fleets of the world, but not to the navies of the world. An official communication tells Uncle Sam that Russia is coming back to prosperity in 1923; that it wants American capital and American goods to organize its business, and that when it returns to commerce it does not want the war ships of other nations swooping about its only access to the sea.

Offhand, the Russian position appears sound. However, it comes with less weight because of the fact that Proletarian Russia is now the world's greatest militaristic autocracy. Other nations want naval access to the shores of a country which maintains the world's greatest army and which more or less candidly is ambitious to revolutionize government in all countries.

Exciting stories are coming from Mer Rouge, Louisiana. Reports refer to numerous whippings and to two murders by masked men said to be Klansmen. Dr. McKoin, now of Baltimore, formerly mayor of Mer Rouge, who was compelled to flee from Louisiana, has been arrested as the instigator of the assassinations, and is fighting extradition from Maryland. It is said a million dollars have been raised to defend the alleged Klansmen. The district is under martial law, and United States secret service men are securing evidence.

It will be remembered that within the month the governor of Louisiana elected President Harding, and stories were published to the effect that he came to ask government aid because of what he termed "the complete collapse of government in his state owing to terrorism of the Klansmen."

The appearance of government department of justice operators in the Mer Rouge case tends to verify the truth of these stories and suggests that the hand of Washington is reaching out to lay hold of the Klansmen.

News stories coming from Mer Rouge bear earmarks of partisanship, and some of them appear to be propaganda. One story is that Dr. McKoin led the law and order group, but the victims of the night raid were Klansmen and outlaws. The opposite version is that the murdered men came of the best families, their roots going back to the settlement of the country, that they were law-abiding citizens, whose only crime was that they revolted against the invisible government.

Readers of the Tribune can not yet know the truth. They can draw their own conclusions, that is all. But they do know that a condition of civil war has been created in the Mer Rouge district, that men were beaten, and two slain, without authority of law and without the safeguards provided in the American constitution. The fundamental thing about the Ku Klux Klan is not the questions of religion and race which it is said to raise. To be justified, its existence means that our present government has failed, and that democracy has proven a blunder. That is the thing which men should consider when contemplating membership in the Klan. Large numbers of our citizens are not sufficiently law fearing, but they can not be made law fearing by the assertion of lawless power, however good the motive of those who seek to apply it, nor can the better class, who might join, hope to keep in hand worse elements who would be sure to procure membership, and who would use that membership for the purpose of selfishness and private vengeance.

DAUGHTER OF LATE U. S. CHIEF JUSTICE FOUND A SUICIDE

Wealthy Woman, Former Washington Social Favorite, Dead in Cheap Flat

CHICAGO, Ill.—Neighbors breaking down the door of a cheaply furnished little three-room apartment Saturday found the body of Mrs. Maude Fuller Delius, eldest daughter of the late Melville W. Fuller, chief justice of the U. S. supreme court.

Once a Washington society favorite, Mrs. Delius, police believe, ended her life a suicide, some time during the last three weeks. She was last seen alive Dec. 2.

The rooms still reeked with the odors of burned cigarettes and narcotics, according to Coroner Wolf. Police base their belief in suicide on the fact that the door had been barred with a shovel braced beneath the knob.

Beside the body was a check for $535 and a bank book showed a balance of $97,000 in a local bank. She had a monthly income of $500 and owned considerable property here, but despite that fact had lived virtually a recluse, since the death of her husband, who killed himself eighteen years ago.

She was about 55 years old.

HOOVER AND MELLON GIVE ADVICE UPON FARM CREDITS BILL

WASHINGTON.—Secretaries Mellon of the treasury department, Hoover of the commerce department, and Wallace of the department of agriculture, conferred Saturday with the senate banking committee on features of the pending bills to extend short-time farm marketing credits and provide long time credits for the cattle industry.

Secretary Hoover was understood to have expressed a preference for the pending Lenroot bill, but to have indicated some hesitancy as to an endorsement of the extension proposed by that measure in the time for rediscount of agricultural paper.

Mr. Hoover, it also was said, opposed use of the federal reserve board as an agency in the extension of farm credits, preferring utilization of the farm loan board, which he was said to feel should be made the agricultural financial agency of the government.

been the continued and satisfactory progress of readjustment of business industry, due in no small part, it would seem, to the general, sound basic condition of the government as contrasted with Great Britain, Italy, Germany and Turkey, where the governments have changed hands within the last thirty days, and a good portion of the world has been disturbed. The unemployment situation is better than it was a year ago. Revival of industry in this country has brought about conditions where there may be said to be no involuntary unemployment at the present time, in fact, a shortage of skilled labor in some quarters. There has been increased foreign buying in certain commodities within the last two months and trade as a whole shows up well, with the best retail business of the year. One of the most interesting developments has been the movement on the part of various industrial corporations to increase their working capital by stock dividends, which reflects confidence in the future. There are marked indications of less reckless spending, more economy and thrift on the part of the people, which augers well for true prosperity. I believe we may look forward with reasonable assurance for a period of prosperity during 1923."

NO HARDSHIPS HERE

F. W. Sisson, president of the Sisson, Seelstad, Hougren company, "The year 1922 is now in the discard as far as actual operation of business is concerned, and all are busily engaged with their annual invoice, which, when completed, will tell the tale. The result, to those who have conducted their business along economical lines, should be gratifying and show a decided improvement over 1920 and '21. We are most fortunate in our particular territory inasmuch as we are entirely free from the hardships encountered in many sections of our country, and while no one can foretell what 1923 will bring forth, in our opinion, it should show a decided improvement over 1922. Commodities in the food line, at the present time, all show material strength in price and while we do not look for any big advances, we do expect them to hold firm during the entire season."

BIG BUILDING YEAR

Frank Hood of the Trane company: "We wish to take this opportunity of saying that the Trane company has experienced an excellent year during 1922. The construction industry throughout the country, with the exception of a few points, had a record season and the demands for our goods were consequently heavy. From all the information that is available at the present time, it would appear that 1923 will be even a heavier year in the construction industry, and we are therefore looking for an increased volume. Such an increase will undoubtedly place us in a position to employ more help and perhaps extend our plant. We have no definite plans for such extension at the present moment, however."

NEW U. S. FUEL CHIEF

WASHINGTON.—Appointment of Francis R. Wedieigh as federal fuel distributor to succeed Conrad E. Spens, who retires voluntarily January 1, was announced Saturday at the white house. Mr. Wedieigh has been Mr. Spens' assistant.

NEWS SLEUTHS HAVE BUSY DAY TRAILING ELUSIVE WEDDING OF MRS. EDITH R. MCCORMICK

CHICAGO, Ill.—By the Associated Press.—Reporters keeping vigil over the Lake Shore drive mansion of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick watching for symptoms that her rumored marriage to Edwin Krenn, young Swiss architect, was about to take place, spent a busy but fruitless day.

Early in the morning newspapermen and women and photographers surrounded the house at every vantage point, with additional details stationed across the street to cover Mr. Krenn's hotel.

Ha! Krenn Escapes

At 10:30 their watchful waiting had its first jolt when the hotel guard discovered it had lost Mr. Krenn. Five minutes of agitated hunting and he was found four blocks away strolling down the avenue. Reporters and photographers fell into line and the procession moved on. At his radio shop, his first business venture in America, Mr. Krenn stopped for a conference with Adolph Dato, his Swiss shop manager.

The conference over, they bundled the shop's books under their arms and departed for the McCormick mansion, where the entire newspaper guard mobilized and stood at attention.

Ha! The Carpet

They didn't have long to wait. Shortly two uniformed footmen unrolled the red party carpet down the front steps and over it crept a gaily striped awning. A bulletin was despatched to the newspaper offices and photographers climbed nearby trees in search of better vantage points.

Next a limousine arrived and a fashionably gowned guest, who looked as though she might be the advance guard of a wedding party, tripped up the steps. Society editors peering through the iron fence announced Mrs. Martin B. Pike.

A second car arrived. Miss Harriet Monroe, poetess and editor of a poetry magazine, followed up the red carpeted steps.

Ha! They Leave

A long wait. Two o'clock came and passed, and three empty cars appeared and Mrs. McCormick and several friends came down the steps and were whisked away while reporters raced for a nearby taxicab fleet. The chase ended when Mrs. McCormick was discovered entertaining her friends in her box at the opera.

While breathless reporters heard a sigh of relief the hotel guard was discovering it had misplaced Mr. Krenn again. Four minutes later he was found stopping into his coupe. Motor mounted correspondents trailed the elusive Swiss into the Loop. He parked and went shopping for two phonograph records, walked about a bit and admired the store windows, then returned to his car, where an irate traffic policeman was waiting with a sign directing Mr. Krenn to appear in court Tuesday and explain a violation of the traffic laws.

Next the chase led back to the Radio shop, a short wait and the cavalcade—Mr. Krenn's coupe and a half dozen taxicabs—returned to the hotel, and Mr. Krenn went to his suite.

Ha! They Speak French

There a much agitated Mr. Dato, who had been waiting in his employer's rooms, burst into voluble French. Some of the newspaper guards, who had remained to watch the hotel suite, volunteered explanations. Correspondents seeking a private interview had hit on the expedient of sticking noses under his door but watchful rivals promptly fished them out again.

Mr. Dato, waiting within, had been vainly trying to catch one of the elusive envelopes as it appeared and disappeared.

Mrs. McCormick has been free to marry since Thursday, when one year had elapsed since her divorce from Harold McCormick, the Harvester magnate, who last summer married Ganna Walska, opera star, in Paris.

THE DAY IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON.—The house and senate adjourned over New Year's until Wednesday.

The house completed consideration of the annual postoffice appropriation bill carrying $584,614,000.

The treasury, through Secretary Mellon, endorsed before the senate banking committee, the Capper agricultural credits bill.

A supplemental appropriation of $6,500,000 was requested of congress by President Harding for modernization of battleships.

The senate passed the $325,000,000 naval appropriation bill without the Borah economic conference amendment, but with the house provision urging a further naval limitation agreement.

The first annual conference of senior circuit judges, called to discuss the condition of business in federal courts and adopt means to relieve congestion, adjourned.

Upon the basis of figures covering Canadian trade officials emphasized assertions that the new tariff law had caused no cessation in the flow of imports into the United States.

The interstate commerce commission notified the senate that approximately forty railroads in the United States have earned more than the six percent fair return standard set by the transportation act.

President Harding commuted sentences of eight former members of the Industrial Workers of the World, convicted of conspiracy and violation of war-time laws, to expire at once on condition they leave the country.

The government filed with the supreme court two briefs challenging the jurisdiction of that court in appeals brought by foreign steamship companies from the prohibition ruling of Judge Hand at New York.

The special federal grand jury returned an indictment against Benedict Crowell, former assistant secretary of war, and six other war-time officials in connection with the award by the government of war-time contracts.

FLOORS PALMER HOUSE CASHIER—TAKES $10,000

CHICAGO, Ill.—A robber Saturday afternoon held up Mrs. Katherine Donovan, head bookkeeper of the Palmer House—famous old hostelry of world's fair days—knocked her unconscious and escaped with from $5,000 to $10,000 of the hotel's funds. Mrs. Donovan was alone in the auditor's office.

URGES ARMOUR PROBE

WASHINGTON.—Investigation of the recently organized corporation of Armour & Company of Delaware and the projected combination of Armour & Company with Morris & Company, by the federal trade commission was urged Saturday in a resolution introduced in the senate by Senator Norris, republican, of Nebraska. The resolution was referred to the agriculture committee of which Senator Norris is chairman.

There are at present, 6,070 miles of railway in Japan.

HELD FOR ARSON HE CONFESSES HE KILLED HIS WIFE

Special Grand Jury Called at Fairmont, Minn., in Hamblen Case

FAIRMONT, Minn.—Judge E. C. Dean of the district court Saturday afternoon called a special grand jury to meet Wednesday to consider the case of Clarence Hamblen, who is alleged to have confessed to the murder of his wife at Ceylon, Minn., on October 9.

Hamblen, who shortly after the death of his wife and the destruction of his home by fire collected his wife's life insurance and left for Stockton, Calif., was brought back this week to face a charge of arson in connection with the fire. Upon close questioning he is alleged to have made a signed confession to having murdered his wife. He has also expressed a willingness to plead guilty to murder, it is said.

RITCH MITCHELL SIGNED TO MEET JOHNNY DUNDEE

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—Ritchie Mitchell, local lightweight boxer, was on Saturday matched to meet Johnny Dundee of New York, in a ten round bout, to be held before a local club on January 8. The weight has been stipulated at 135 pounds at three o'clock on the date of the contest. The boxers are to split sixty-five percent of the gross receipts.

BATTLING SIKI SUES BOXING FEDERATION FOR RE-INSTATEMENT

PARIS.—Battling Siki filed a suit in the civil courts Saturday against Paul Rosseau, president of the French boxing federation for annulment of his nine months disqualification and for restoration of his title as European heavyweight champion which he won from Georges Carpentier.

TUNNEY-DELANEY BOUT OFF

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—A twelve round bout scheduled here for January 8, between Gene Tunney, former American light-heavyweight champion, and Jimmy Delaney of St. Paul, was called off Saturday night upon receipt of advices that Tunney was ill and would be unable to fulfill his engagement.

HAD THOMPSON HUNTED FOR FLIVVER TO FIT CRANK IT WOULD HAVE BEEN HARD JOB

On a still night the telephone at police headquarters would jangle boisterously, and almost uproariously, and frequently jarring Desk Sergeant Wendling from his gentle reverie. One night last week the telephone became clamorously insistent with its metallic jangling after a particularly peaceful period.

"Police headquarters," was Sergeant Wendling's response to the summons.

"This is the Burlington passenger station on Pearl street," was the word over the wire. "Send a policeman down here quick."

Thompson Put on Job

Blaine Thompson was the only officer in the roll room at the time and was dispatched forthwith to the Burlington station. Thompson scented a mystery from afar and made the distance at double time. Entering the waiting room Thompson gazed around. There wasn't a soul in sight, there were no signs of a riot, not a single "dead one" visible anywhere—nothing but great globs of emptiness. Spring Ross Gould, ticket agent on duty at the time behind the barred window of the ticket office, Officer Thompson asked:

"Did you call up police headquarters and ask for a policeman?"

"Yes, I did," answered Gould.

"Well, what's the trouble?" impatiently asked Officer Thompson, somewhat irritated over the seeming needless waste of energy on the part of the several members of "the finest."

"I want you take it out of here," said Gould. "Take what out of here?" demanded Officer Thompson.

"That," said Gould, pointing his finger toward a bench. Officer Thompson looked in the indicated direction. He could see nothing. Then he peered, then he squinted, then he stared, transfixed. Gould's guess was sure fire. THEY were there, right there on the bench in the middle of the room. Cautiously, Officer Thompson approached the bench, as though not to disturb them. Then he gazed on them for a time, eventually gathering them up, placing them in an envelope and stowing them safely away in an inside pocket, where they would be shielded from harm.

Out With 'em, Said Gould

"Now that you have them, please remove them from the station," requested Gould. "They have been hanging around here for an hour. They don't seem to belong to anybody and there is no train due for some time and there hasn't been any in for an hour. We have absolutely no use for them in this station, away with them," Officer Thompson complied.

Within an hour after this episode in the Burlington station late at night, the scene shifts rapidly. Officer Thompson was standing at Third and Pearl streets. The night was as still as when he responded to the hurly call to the Burlington station. Few people were on the streets. Occasionally a taxicab would snort around the corner. Otherwise Pearl street was slumbering the sleep of the just.

Down the street on his tip-toes came a man, of somewhat uncertain age, who stepped gingerly along, picking his way hither and thither. As he hove into the offing, Officer Thompson glanced at him. Slowly Thompson's eyes narrowed to mere glints, that sparkled and crackled. As the stranger passed Thompson the officer shot out a husky arm and hand and slapped the stranger on the back. The stranger stopped still in his tracks.

"Turn around," demanded Thompson.

Stranger Is Uncertain

"I dunno, Mister Policeman," quavered the stranger. He was not certain just what crime he had committed on the high seas.

"Well, here," said Thompson in a softer tone of voice. "Let me make you a nice Christmas present. And take a tip from me, don't abuse your best friends like that again, for without them you sure look like a saphead. Try 'em."

The stranger did. He grinned. He distorted his face a few times, facial calisthenics as it were.

"Yep, they fit," he declared. "Guess they are mine all right." And he went on his way rejoicing.

Moral: Never go to sleep on a railroad station bench without either anchoring your false teeth, both uppers and lowers, or parking them at the check room; it's safer and you know they will be there when you want 'em again.

Another feature act which comes direct from the big State theatre in Minneapolis, is "The Scotch Duggins and Dudos," a three act, with many Scottish and popular songs. Comedy talking, song and dance will be included in the "Nifty Nonsense" which Al and Mabel Joy are scheduled to offer. These two persons mingle comedy tricks and situations with their offering to such an extent that they are rated among the vaudeville "laugh acts." Miss Joy is said to be all that her name implies for she is not only capable in her stage work but is beautiful in appearance as well.

Another comedy feature is Wilson and Hart, who have a comedy singing and talking act that the Milwaukee press reports say is a wonder.

WHAT I THINK OF "THE MAN WHO PLAYED GOD"—

ONCE IN A WHILE you see a picture that makes you want to tell everyone you meet what a splendid, wonderful production it is, that you just want every man, woman and child to see it. A picture that you are sure would make the world better. A picture you are sure everyone would more than enjoy. Such a picture is "THE MAN WHO PLAYED GOD" with GEORGE ARLISS. I have seen it and I want everyone to see it; if there is a man, woman, or child in La Crosse who can't afford to pay to see this picture let them come to the box office, give their name and address and they will be admitted free.

M. E. BISHOPS ASK NATIONS TO REPENT FOR PART IN WAR

Statement Scores "Unjust Accumulation of Huge Profits by Financial Corporations"

CHICAGO, Ill.—Scoring what it terms "unjust accumulation and inequitable distribution of huge surplus of profits by financial corporations" and the distribution of "rewards of conquest in the form of governmental monopolies," the board of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church, in a statement issued here, calls upon nations to "individual and national repentance for whatever share we may have taken in the defense and support of un-Christian programs of power." The statement was adopted by twenty-six bishops in conference.

"America," the statement says, "should unhesitatingly accept her full responsibility for leadership in the restoration of a broken world. She should refuse to sanction any war except for strictest self-defense of humanity. She should continue to advocate universal disarmament and should not hesitate in asking that an international conference be called for this great purpose."

The growth of "personal and organized greed has limited and often defeated" the ideals of Christian society, the statement continued. "The first corrective of the world's woe is sincere repentance. The second corrective is the organization of political and social life everywhere upon the basis of the welfare of all."

"We deplore the unjust accumulation and inequitable distribution of huge surplus profits by financial corporations. We insist that Christian principles shall be applied alike to capital and labor."

"We deplore the distribution of rewards of conquest in the form of governmental monopolies and territorial control for personal and selfish advantage."

"We deplore the investment of taxes in armaments and pompous display, and urge the nations of the world not only to limit but to destroy this bulwark of hatred. It is our solemn judgment that nothing short of the actual application of the principles of Jesus in governmental, economic, religious and racial life today will meet the need."

BUSY YEAR FOR BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS IS SEEN IN STREET AND BUILDING WORK

Construction of Three New Schools and Expansive Street Paving and Grading Program is Contemplated; Bond for Sewer and Water Extensions

WITH the construction of three schools occupying the city administration, together with an expansive street improvement program now in the process of organization, there every indication that the coming year of 1923 will be a busy one for the board of public works of the city of La Crosse.

$350,000 School Bonds
In line with prosecution of the school construction program, the common council heard the introduction of a $350,000 bonding ordinance for schools at the November meeting, final action and passage of which will be completed at the January session.

The schools to be built during the year are the Lincoln, Vocational and North Branch schools.

While the bonding ordinance of $350,000 already introduced in the council is insufficient by a large margin to cover the proposed expenditure in the construction of all three schools, the amount will cover the main contracts, money for the extra expenditures being appropriated after construction is under way.

As a location for the new North Branch school the common council has voted to erect the building on lots owned by the city at George and Livingston streets. A lengthy petition of property owners asking the council to locate the school at the old site on Wood street was read before the council. However, it was the opinion of the city body after careful consideration that it would be to a better financial advantage to place the school on ground already owned by the city. The twentieth ward election booth stands on the property.

Owners Refuse Bids
Some difficulty in obtaining sufficient ground on which to construct the Lincoln school is being experienced by the council. The council has made it a policy to act reservedly in the matter of condemnation proceedings to acquire the necessary ground for the school, but it is apparent from the refusal of several property owners residing in the block in which the school is located, to accept the city's bid, that measures of this nature will necessarily have to be resorted to. In the meantime the matter has been referred back to the committee on grounds and buildings and will come up for consideration again at the January meeting on January 12. A resolution has been adopted to purchase 60 feet additional to the ground now occupied by the Lincoln school.

The present building at Sixth and Vine streets which houses the vocational school will be razed and a new structure built, according to a proposal of the common council. Definite action regarding the vocational school has not been taken by the council pending recommendations of the board of education yet to be heard by the council.

More Street Improvements
Improvement of city streets in 1923 will again continue as an important project of the board of public works. In addition to actual improvement of streets by paving, the city council has before it a vast program of street grading to meet the demands of expanding residential districts. Many miles of new sidewalk construction is contemplated and is now before committees of the council.

The grading work for the year has been divided into two contracts, one of which has already been let with work ordered to be commenced as soon as the weather will permit. The board of public works will let the second contract at a meeting on January 6. The grading work will be started when the ground is in condition and continue throughout the summer until completed.

In spite of the fact that the city plans an extensive street improvement program, the demand, petitions and resolutions now in committee of the council represent requests for nearly a million dollars worth of street improvements over and above the amount tentatively agreed to by members of the street improvement committee.

As a sort of established policy the tax levy for all purposes will probably be held to 26 mills or less and the amount of public improvement will be determined by available funds and moderate bond issues with maturities arranged so as not to embarrass the city in payment within the limit of resources based on such minimum tax levy.

Sewer and Water
Two separate bonding ordinances for sewer and water main extensions in addition to the school bonding measure are pending in the council at the present time. Each of the ordinances, which have received their first and second reading, provide for the issuance of $50,000 bonds all of which goes to show that residents in the outlying districts who have been clamoring for sewer and water improvement for a number of years will be taken care of this year.

A part of the work contracted for last year has not been completed as yet, but will be included in the work hoped to be accomplished by the board of public works this year.

A tentative comparison of public improvements for the past and coming year shows that 1923 will figure slightly in excess of that amount expended in 1922, in view of the fact that one additional school is to be constructed this year.

Outstanding Legislation
The outstanding legislation of the common council for the past year is the adoption of an ordinance assessing to abutting property as benefits for street improvements only the amount represented in the cost of the permanent foundation, curb and gutter. At the time this measure was adopted, the city of La Crosse was the first in the state to revolutionize the system of payment for street improvements among cities.

Since La Crosse adopted this ordinance it has been reported that four other cities in the state have committed themselves to a similar measure.

While the street paving ordinance stands out above all others adopted by the council during the past year, several other measures have been passed meeting new conditions and in response to general requests made by citizens.

The present bonded indebtedness of the city of La Crosse is extended over a term of ten years, maturing as follows: In 1923, $167,000, which is provided for in the present budget; in 1924, $130,000 must be raised for maturing bonds and interest; in 1925, $156,600; in 1926, $73,000; in 1927, $97,250; in 1928, $89,500; in 1929, $93,750; in 1930, $78,250; in 1931, $79,250; in 1932, $43,500.

From the above figures it is seen that the largest amount to be raised in any one year in the next ten years is in 1923, which has been provided for in the budget adopted at the November meeting of the council.

The council completed motoriza-tion of the fire department last year program and the erection of two in addition to an extensive street schools.

"Happy New Year."

While the festive water ago, wends its weary way about the streets of the burgh and revelers make merry at the stroke of twelve to light, a lot of more serious-minded folks, attending devotions in the churches or holding sober communion with one another before the family fireside, will take account of the events of the passing year and conjecture what life is old 1923 has in store for La Crosse and the home-loving people who claim residence here. Businessmen unite in declaring that the past year has been a prosperous one for La Crosse. They point to two million dollars worth of building improvements, a growing prestige as a manufacturing and retail trade center and numerous public improvements to bear witness to the development of the city during these twelve months. Equally important is the fact that there are few unemployed persons in La Crosse. No one knows what the coming year hold in store for this city. Men who feel the pulse of business and men of vision venture the prediction that it will be another prosperous year for this community. They see no clouds in the sky and aver that, if a storm does come, La Crosse can weather it, as the city has others in years gone by. The real big men of the city, scanning the comprehensive program for the advancement of the city adopted by the Chamber of Commerce recently, invariably select one plank in the platform, "the greatest forward move for La Crosse from an industrial standpoint. With the greatest artery of commerce in the country passing by our doors, businessmen of La Crosse who know its possibilities, would welcome no big forward movement for this city more than this year than news that the father of waters had come back into its own as a carrier of freight. And for a new year's wish, here's hoping it comes true.

Perhaps the most delightful feature of the holidays is the family reunions which mark the event. There are hundreds of persons in a Crosse home right now for the first time in a year, and needless to say, reunions are happy events. Not all of them could make the grade for holidays, but they embraced the custom in sending greetings, both of a substantial and cheery nature, to the home. George Snow, actor, is one of those who found himself a long way off when Christmas time came. From far away in Texas he sent his southern law, Carl Patton, a card containing a picture of a turkey, and, along about the middle of December, Carl was quite a kiddie, sent him a card to George stating that the picture looked good, but I can't eat the photo. That was the one that George was waiting for, and he forthwith shipped a box of goodies to La Crosse which taxed the strength of a husky express wagon driver. And as a result Mr. and Mrs. Carl Patton and guests sat down to a Christmas dinner which included, among other toothsome dishes, a 26-pound turkey, probably the largest served at any family holiday dinner in this city.

Speaking of holiday eats reminds me that a number of families here enjoyed roasts of buffalo meat during the holidays. The meat that came from the plainsmen and Indians and was the common piece of resistance of daily meals graced the tables of a hundred or more La Crosse families Christmas day. The buff to come from a range in South Dakota and was distributed by "Bunch" Johnson to all customers who cared for his meat. And those who took a chance on it was decidedly worth while for the meat tasted very much like beef, but had a wild flavor that made the sportsmen lick their chops.

The telephone bell rang, and a voice on the wire said "New York is calling the managing editor." And a minute later the m. e. was talking to his sister in the metropolis as easily as if she were in the same room. One of the wonders of the age is the way the telephone bridges distance and enables one to talk to persons far away. Will Goodrich, manager of the local phone company, told me the other day about a traveling representative of a big roofing company who saves weeks of travel and time by judicious and systematic use of the long distance telephone. Ironically this chap comes to La Crosse, registers at the Standard, has a special telephone put in his room and proceeds to do business on a wire according to Hoyle. In a matter of two days this man calls up his customers in Wisconsin and Minnesota, the territory covered by the company from Duluth to Janesville. The telephone calls cost him a big dollar a day, but he cheerfully pays the bill, declaring he is saving a hundred dollars in traveling expenses, to say nothing of the inconceivable discomforts of playing night stands on the road. Needless to say, this long distance peddler is an honest-to-goodness salesman. If he wasn't his firm wouldn't stand for an expense-account of a hundred and ten or fifteen iron-men per day.

There comes from Hatfield, where the street railway company here gets its juice to run its street cars an Indian story which might be termed ultra-modern and is calculated to appeal to several hundred La Crosse misses and mandames who parted with their long tresses several moons ago. There was a great commotion up in the Indian camp near Hatfield a few nights ago. Settlers nearby heard the muffled booming of Indian drums, the yells of warriors and the plaintive wails of squaws. At the Indian settlement the feast of Owatunka, spirit of welcome, was being celebrated in one of its wildest demonstrations. On a sylvan throne, built of boulders rolled from the bank of the river, sat the cause of the commotion, Princess Newawa Gayfish, 18-year-old Winnipeg beauty, wife of Dan Gayfish, and daughter of Chief Running Wolf, who was exiled several weeks ago because she became a flapper and bobbed her hair, had returned. With her on the shrine sat her 18-months-old baby.

Around them danced their kin, rejoicing in the hope that the presence of the princess will shake off the ill luck that had befallen the natives since they forced her to leave the reservation. Soon after Princess Newawa departed an epidemic of grip swept the tribe and although none died it was regarded as an evil omen. The climax was reached when a hood owl, known in Indian as the usagutu (bad charm), visited the encampment and hooted nightly for a week. A council was called and the Indians decided Princess Newawa must return, regardless of her modern views. Her husband was selected for the mission and made the trip to Nelmeska, where she had been living temporarily with a married sister. Newawa made him promise solemnly to let her live as a flapper and the pair began to journey back to Wisconsin. It is believed there will be no more protests over whether Princess Newawa bobs her hair, wears 'em up or rolls 'em down or shimmies when she ought to be dancing a la redskin.

Monkey Gland Farm
Arising from the investigations of the Pasteur Institute and the experiments of Dr. Voronoff in grafting monkey glands upon human beings, a bacteriologist, Dr. Wilbert, is starting for West Africa in January to establish there a vast breeding ground for anthropoid apes. Scientific laboratories will be built in the vicinity. This is likely to bring down the price of animals which have been in demand for that purpose. They have been recently quoted at high figures.

La Crosse Man Attains Success As Geologist

KIRK S. WHITE

FRIENDS of Kirk S. White, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. White, 1414 Madison street, will be pleased to learn of the success of the La Crosse man following his graduation from the University of Michigan.

It is announced that Mr. White will sail from New York January 3 on the S. S. Metapan for South America, where he will be engaged as a petroleum geologist for the International Petroleum company, Ltd. His work will take him to Colombia, Ecuador and Peru.

The La Crosse man is a graduate of the local high school, entering the university of Michigan the same year of his graduation here in 1919. Mr. White recently received his A. B. degree from the Michigan institution. During his university career, Mr. White was for three years a member of the Boxing club, and honored with the presidency of that organization in his junior year. He is a member of the Sigma Chi and Sigma Gamma Epsilon fraternities.

Mr. White has been spending the holidays with his parents in the city, leaving today for New York.

BUILDINGS STARTED HERE DURING 1922 WORTH $2,000,000

Over 200 Residences, Schools and Industrial Plants Built or Under Course of Building

30-ROOM ANNEX TO LINKER HOTEL TO START SHORTLY

Biggest Year in Building History of City is Expected for 1923

MORE than 200 buildings, residences, schools and industrial plants, with a total estimated value of about $2,000,000 have been built in La Crosse in the past year, according to figures in the possession of the tax commissioner, city comptroller and architects of the city.

In 1922 La Crosse experienced a building boom that has not been equalled for a long time. Most of the construction work, especially of residences, are jobs that have been delayed on account of the war and the subsequent high prices immediately following the war.

1923 Seen As Big Year

For 1923, another great building year is looked for by both architects and builders, provided, of course, that the cost of building materials doesn't take to hitting an advance in price that will prohibit many from building homes or that there is no scarcity of building materials.

Tax Commissioner Frisch and his assessors have listed about 181 residences completed last year or nearly completed by the end of the year. This number applies to homes only. It does not include the two new schools completed last fall, the Logan Junior High on the north side and the Washburn, Eighth and Main street.

Other buildings not reckoned in the 191 are the new Christian Science church on West Avenue, the new Nelson Garment company's plant, Third and Cameron avenue, now in the course of construction; the addition to Erickson's bakery; Balzer's paint shop; the addition to Hackner's plant; the addition to the Trans plant and the garage Sid Law is building at Fourth and King street.

City Does Some Building

City building that does not figure in the 191 buildings are the Logan Junior High school, the Washburn school, the $1,500 voting booth, in the fifteenth ward and the addition to the Logan playground.

The scenes of the greatest activity in homebuilding in the past year has been in Spier's, Canterbury's, Josey's and Johnston's addition to North La Crosse. Fifty-five new residences have been built on the north side in the past 12 months. On the

MARIE ESCH IS TEACHING LITTLE RASCALS IN NEW SCHOOL AT WASHINGTON

TEACHES INCORRIGIBLES

MISS MARIE ESCH

South side, that is south of the La Crosse river, the building activity has been confined largely to the area east of Sixteenth street to the foot of the bluffs and from Vine street to Mormon Coulee road.

The average price of new homes built last year was $3,500 to $4,000, they run as high as $13,000 and $15,000. It is explained, that many buildings started after May 1 have not been figured in the number of buildings completed this year because they will not go on the assessment.

One of the largest local projects that will be started within the next few weeks will be the addition to the Linker hotel, which will be built on the site of the Schiller saloon building on South Fourth street. The saloon building is to be torn down and with it will pass into local history one of the best known saloons in the city in the old days. A four-story building is to be erected on the site connecting with the four-story annex in the rear of the main building of the Linker hotel. The addition is to have 30 rooms and baths. The first floor will be a store, while the three upper floors will be devoted exclusively to hotel rooms.

Linker to Have 100 Rooms

According to George Linker, the second annex will be pushed to completion as early as possible and it will give the hotel a capacity of 100 rooms. The front of the next addition will be of terra cotta and brick. The annex will have a frontage on Fourth street of 27 feet and a depth of 65 feet. Parking and Dockendorff are the architects.

"There is more winter construction going on this year than for some time past," said Otto Merman, architect. "This is due to the mild weather we have had and also because of the rush to get work done that was planned several years ago, in fact as far back as the last year of the war and the year just after the end of the war. I expect this boom in building to continue next year, provided there is no scarcity of materials. Already the pinch is being felt in certain steel products and in coal."

"However, this winter construction work has continued on the addition to the La Crosse hotel, the K. P. lodge rooms at Avon and Clinton streets, the Art Glass company's plant, the Cameron garage, the Law garage that will be occupied by Bergh, and the Nelson Garment company's new home.

Great Boom All Over U. S.

"Statistics show that in the United States in 1922 there were 300,000,000 square feet of residences built, while in 1921 there were 210,000,000 square feet. The value of all buildings in 1922 was $3,125,000,000 while in 1921 it was $2,350,000,000. In the Chicago district, in which La Crosse is included the value of all buildings in 1922 was $604,000,000, of which $341,000,000 represented residences and in 1921 the total value of new buildings was $500,000,000. In November half of the building operations in the Chicago district were residential work and last November there was 28 per cent more construction work under way than in November 1921."

Mr. Merman has had a busy year in nearby towns, planning many residences in Viroqua, Sparta, Galesville and Winona. One of his biggest projects in Winona has been the plans for the new theater the Beverstedes are now building.

Parkinson and Dockendorff have planned schools in North La Crosse, Marinette, Horton, Westfield, Wausau, Merrill, Kaukauna, Beaver Dam, Oconomowoc, Eagle River, Sparta, Phillips, Lancaster, Gays Mills, Alma Center and Mayville. They also have drawn the plans for churches in Merrill, Stockbridge, parochial school at St. Mary's Ridge, West Bend, La. Lakefield, Minn.; a woolen mills at Prairie du Chien; Masonic Temple at Sparta; Masonic temple and theater at Viroqua; a five-story office building at Appleton for the Luther Aid society.

Persistent exposure to X-rays often results in serious disease to those handling it.

LA CROSSE GIRL HAS HARD PUPILS IN AN INSTITUTION

First Teacher in United States to Instruct Class in House of Detention

Miss Marie Esch, daughter of Interstate Commerce Commissioner and Mrs. John J. Esch of La Crosse, is teaching incorrigible youngsters in the house of detention at Washington and enjoying the task, according to word received by La Crosse friends.

Latest reports received from the nation's capital were that Miss Esch had 24 little rascals packed in her school room. The patience of Job, the generalship and control of an angel are required to keep this gang of cut-throats minding their p's and q's, but from all accounts Miss Esch is boss of the works and is so eminently successful in her task that educational authorities of the District of Columbia and surrounding cities, including Philadelphia, are sitting up and taking notice of the success of the experiment.

Born in La Crosse

Miss Esch was born in La Crosse and graduated from the local high school and from the University of Wisconsin. In Madison she did social work among the Italians in their quarter. That was her only taste of social work until she launched into this new field at Washington. For two years after graduating from the university she taught English in the high school; then last summer she went abroad.

When she returned to Washington, where the family is spending the winter, Miss Esch looked around for something worth while to do. She heard that the Washington board of education had decided to have a teacher for the children in the house of detention. This was the first time the plan was tried anywhere in this country. Miss Esch applied for the job and got it.

All First Offenders

The children in her school room are in the house of detention for their first offense, generally for rowdiness or theft. One youngster in the school stole an automobile. Some are fugitives from justice. Quite a few are in for assault and battery.

Pity the teacher if the lads ever took it into their heads to show off their prowess as roughnecks. But Miss Esch is not afraid, and the youngsters respect her authority, and while they do draw funny pictures of "teacher" as kids have from time immemorial and always will, there are no rowdy outbreaks in the house of detention school room.

"The house of detention is just what the name implies—a place to detain children convicted of a first offense for a few days until some provision has been made for them—either the court sends them home or to an institution," explained Miss Esch. "And that is one thing that makes it very hard. The longest time a child is in the house is three weeks, many are here only three days, so it is practically impossible to get any noticeable results. Even if there are results I will not get a chance to see them."

"Most of the children are from eight to sixteen years old, and it requires a great deal of ingenuity to know how to deal with them. Every day my class is made up of different children. I have a little questionnaire, and I ask all the children to answer it before they get in class. I find out their age, at what grade they left school, what types of books they like to read, what is their favorite sport and what subjects they like to study best."

"Most of them say arithmetic and spelling, but of course I teach them English and history and geography, too. Then we have carpentry and clay modeling, basketry and paper-cutting. We read books, stories and illustrate them in clay. When we read Hiawatha we made an Indian village. Then when we read King Arthur and his Round Table, we made English castles."

To the little, neglected minds entrusted to her care Miss Esch is giving a glimpse of an unknown world—a world peopled with the most romantic and noble characters of all ages.

"We have a many colored children as white," Miss Esch continued, "and some days it is pretty discouraging. I will have my back turned for a minute and hear a conversation something like this:

"'You're a liar,' and then the fun begins."

Then I have to turn around and appeal to their sportsmanship to prevent a fight. I would never accomplish anything if I said, 'Now, boys, stop.' I have to ask them if they think it is fair play to take each other's things, and appeal to them along this line to cement the breach."

"The main trouble with the children is, they have never worked together and they do not know how to play together or in the right manner. It is this sense of community spirit and the rights of others I have to try to impress on them. It is interesting work, and I hope I can do some good here."

And the purse that wore a belt buckle in the middle of its strap, and made a public appearance dangling from midday's belt.

And that ancestor of the bar pin, "For Friendship," written in gold wire with clasped hands of mother-of-pearl.

All these have had their day in La Crosse and passed on, to be succeeded by wrist watches, finger watches, beaded bags, platinum bar pins. They were harmless feminine foibles and their exit was scarcely noticed by the good folk of La Crosse.

But this story is written to notify mankind of the passing of a deadly feminine weapon. The hat pin is gone. Something should be said about it.

"There is little or no demand for hat pins today," said the saleswoman at the notions counter of a Main street store. "We aren't buying hat pins and we aren't selling them. These few black and white ones have been in stock for years. I guess they will be for some time to come."

A dozen short pins with ordinary shoe button tops bristled from the pin cushion, the saleswoman indicated. "No, there aren't any fancy ones," she said. "I can remember the day when the last touch to a snappy costume was a hat pin with a silver donkey's head or monogrammed hat pins in gold, trimmed with sets. Of course, everybody remembers the long hat pins with a murderous point on one side of the hat and a glass eye jabber on the other end."

Hats that fit the head have made the hat pin unnecessary, in the opinion of the saleswoman. Bobbed hair may have helped inaugurate the small tight head hugging hat, she explained.

"We never sell a hat pin to young women today," she continued. "It's only grandmothers who buy them at all. I guess the younger generation has no further need for the hat pin as a weapon."

PATENTS GRANTED BY U. S. IN YEAR SET NEW RECORD

Business of Patent Office too Great for Present Staff to Handle

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Seventy or eighty years ago an official of the United States patent office resigned, saying there would be no more use for the office, "since everything inventable had been invented." In 1920, when applications for new patents jumped from 75,657 to 102,940 for the entire year, it was believed the high water mark had actually been reached, as nothing comparable to that figure had ever before been attained in the history of the office.

In 1921, however, the number rose to 107,656, and in the fiscal year ended last June it reached the total of 113,307, according to the annual report of the commissioner of patents, just published.

The business of the patent office is in excess of what the present force can dispose of adequately and efficiently. Commissioner Robertson reported, and the work has fallen so considerably in arrears that substantial provision for more employees was recommended.

Until three years ago, Mr. Robertson declared, the office received about 8,000 trade-mark applications a year, but in the year closed over 17,000 applications were received.

The patent office was one of the government departments showing a surplus of receipts over expenses or the year. Cash receipts totaled $2,894,286, and total expenses, after paying $196,000 as a bonus, left a net surplus of $172,981.

Has Strangle-hold on Father Time

Recently Mme. Sarah Bernhardt celebrated her seventy-seventh birthday. Her motto has always been "In spite of all," and in spite of all she will not grow old. "I have fought with Time and been stronger than Time," she once said. "I have striven with illness and conquered it. I have battled with death and repulsed it—requesting it to come back later. That is the secret of my youth. I don't propose to die before I am 103."

Do They Turn It Off?

A little girl from Indianapolis with two older sisters, visited Niagara Falls. After watching the volume of water pour over the American side of the falls several minutes she inquired: "Do they turn it off at night?" The girl probably had in mind the water at the Indiana Soldiers and Sailors' monument at Indianapolis, which pours over the stone work there and is turned off late each night.—Indianapolis News.

OPENING OF NEW BRIDGE AT MELROSE ASSURES ANOTHER FINE SCENIC HIGHWAY FROM LA CROSSE TO BLACK RIVER FALLS

(Courtesy of Melrose Chronicle).

Another important highway link connecting La Crosse and Jackson counties and assuring a new improved road between La Crosse, West Salem, Melrose and Black River Falls has been completed. Announcement is made that the handsome new steel bridge spanning Black river a mile and a quarter south of the village of Melrose is finished and opened to traffic.

The bridge crosses the river at what is known as Gaylord's Ferry. The work on the bridge was started January 9, 1922. The bridge cost $58,000, while the estimated cost of engineering was $75,000. The money expended on the bridge was raised by the state, county, town and village of Melrose. The bridge is said to be one of the finest structures of its kind in the state.

The bridge is 664 feet or approximately two blocks long. In addition there is a half mile cut and fill with clay and gravel surfacing, 1,000 feet of guard rail and about 100 cords of riprap. Piling was driven to a depth of 50 feet below the surface of the water and the footings which support the bridge go down 10 feet below the surface of the water. The footings and piers contain 800 cubic yards of concrete. In the floors there are about 300 cubic yards of concrete. In the bridge proper 555,000 pounds of steel was used. Approximately 8,000 rivets were driven on the job. The floor of the bridge is 15 feet above the normal height of the river.

The bridge has a driveway 20 feet wide. Its completion will mean the construction next year of a modern all-weather road from Melrose to West Salem and La Crosse, opening up a new highway from this city to Black River Falls.

The bridge was constructed under the supervision of T. M. Reynolds, La Crosse division engineer of the state highway commission.

Residents of Melrose are justly proud of this fine new bridge, and farmers and villagers residing in the northern part of La Crosse county are likewise enthusiastic over the opening of the structures and the assurance of a new highway between La Crosse and Black River Falls.

An Appreciation

TO the thousands of our La Crosse and nearby city and country patrons, the La Crosse Woman's Club and Miss Margaret Josten, I take this means of thanking you all for your wonderful support in helping me make the presentation of "WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER," at the Riviera Theatre, the GREATEST PHOTOPLAY. SUCCESS in the city of La-Crosse, this year, 1922.

I wish also to thank Bert Beyerstedt, my Musical Director, for his wonderful violin solo and interpretation of the special musical score; Harry Beyerstedt, pianist and manager of the Beyerstedt Brothers Orchestra, for the rendition of, and the perfect synchronizing of the score.

I want you all to know that I sincerely appreciate your support and patronage, which enables me to present for you the really high-class photoplays, and real ORPHEUM Vaudeville.

Some of the coming Paramount attractions are: "KICK IN," with Bert Lytell, Betty Compson and May McAvoy; "BACK HOME AND BROKE," with Thomas Meighan; "THE IMPOSSIBLE MRS. BELLEW," starring Gloria Swanson.

I have arranged for an extraordinary musical treat starting next Wednesday and playing for four days—Senorita Elena Camacho and her famous "ROYAL TROPICAL MARIMBA BAND," world-wide VICTOR artists. You will surely like them, and once again—

I sincerely thank you all.

THE THREE BUCKAROOS

Written and Directed by Fred J. Balshofer

The spirit of Dumas' "Musketeers" is reincarnated in "The Three Buckaroos"—hard-riding, sure-shooting giants of the range. Companions in arms, silent and devilishly ever-present, ready for a fight or a frolic, defenders of unprotected women, champions of love, and foes of wrongdoers. Balshofer has made a lively use of an idea similar to Dumas' plot on a Western range. And midst the sublimity of the High Sierras has produced a picture as crammed with action as a pomegranate is with seeds—the whole enlivened by buoyant comedy and exalted by a noble love.

ROSALIE LYGA TO DANCE AT RIVOLI HEAD OF COMPANY

Special Added Attraction Announced for the Last Half of the Week

An added attraction which will create unusual local interest will be seen at the Rivoli theater Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings of this week when Miss Rosalie Lyga, sister of Dr. Paul A. Lyga and a former resident of this city, will appear here at the head of the Panfare Concert Dancers, interpreting BenShawn dances. F. A. Pruess perfected arrangements for the appearance of Miss Lyga and her company here and has charge of the program.

Miss Lyga is remembered here as an instructor in dancing and dramatic art two or three years ago. She produced a number of very successful plays during her residence here. During the past summer, Miss Lyga studied in New York city at the dancing school of Ruth St. Dennis and Ted Shawn. While at the school she was chosen to do a duet dance for the class with Mr. Shawn. Among the dances to be presented here are: "Moon of Love," a dance with circular veil; "Daisybell," an east Indian temple dance; both dances were created and danced on tour by Ruth St. Dennis herself. "Tuniscene," a native, quick based on moon steps, danced at Rivoli theater, New York city, by Martha Graham; "East Indian Dances," authentic Hindu movements, brought to America by Ruth St. Dennis; other attractive numbers are Gotta's Music Box, Espana and Maria Mari.

SUNSHINE AS A "CON" CURE

The success of the sun treatment for bone and glandular tuberculosis has been substantiated by Dr. Gibson, superintendent at Meridan where 200 children are treated. He asserted that lung tuberculosis yields, like the bone and glandular varieties, to heliotherapy. Dr. O'Brien, superintendent at the Seaside at Meridan, asserted in his paper on bone and glandular tuberculosis, that the following results had been secured:

1. All forms of the disease yield to the sun cure.

2. Surgical operations are unwise for the treatment of diseased glands.

3. Pure sunlight, instead of sunlight filtered through windows, is demanded.

4. The intense suffering which children ill with bone tuberculosis experience stops speedily under the sun cure treatment.

5. The removal of tonsils and adenoids has not led to benefit, but to a decided aggravation of symptoms.

Dr. O'Brien described the sanatoria on the eastern shore of Long Island Sound, where, he said, "even when the ground is covered with snow and the ponds with ice, naked children, who are winning their uphill fight for health, may be seen romping on the beach or swimming in the ocean. According to our experience, exposure of the entire body to the weather, during both summer and winter, not only does not cause colds, but actually is a most effective means of prevention."

"Heliotherapy," we have found at the Seaside increases weight, cures tuberculosis, and in a most remarkable manner stops the suffering from pain."

CASINO TODAY

When Dartigan, the intrepid Gascon, swore lifelong friendship and allegiance to Athos, Porthos and Aramis, the quartet crossed their sword-points in an oath and adopted a motto: "Depart not, sleep not, love not—while danger lurks. One for all and all for one," which meant that each dedicated himself and his life to the service of the others, individually or collectively. And that is the same oath which is taken by Dartigan and the three buckaroos in Fred J. Balshofer's production, "The Three Buckaroos," which is to be the feature attraction at the Casino theater today.

The idea in Balshofer's story is the same as in the Dumas novel, but the theme is different, as are also the characters of the story and its locale.

GIGANTIC GEYSERS OF ALASKA

Near the head of the Copper river in Alaska, in a very rough and broken country, above which rises the cone of the extinct volcano Mount Wrangell, there exists, according to the report of a government officer, a nest of gigantic geysers which may exceed those of the Yellowstone valley in power and magnitude.

The officer was unable to approach near the geysers, but he saw many in eruption from a distance, and he thinks that the steam from the geysers has given rise to erroneous reports from various sources that the crater of Mount Wrangell is still alive. The surrounding country is so rough with its chasms, glaciers and lava beds that the officer is of the opinion that it would be almost impossible for explorers to reach the mountain.—New York Herald.

NEW ARLISS FILM

"One of the best acting companies I have ever had around me," is George Arliss' description of his supporting cast in "The Man Who Played God," his latest photoplay feature which comes to the Rivoli theater today. Ann Forrest, famous for her work in many big pictures, plays opposite the star as the wife of John Arden, famous musician, the role enacted by Arliss, Edward Earle steps from the heroic role of winner of a popularity contest in behalf of a great New York charity, to the part of "heavy" in this production. As Philip Stevens he makes love to Arden's wife, believing that she no longer cares for her musician husband. Effie Shannon as Arden's sister, has a sympathetic role that will endear her to motion picture audiences everywhere. The child star,

MUSICAL COMEDY PAIR AT RIVIERA

Style and finish will be noticeable in the act of McConnell and West, leading the Riviera Sunday bill, which introduces music, songs and some supreme dancing. Miss Kathleen McConnell is a member of the big time vaudeville act. Her partner, Mr. West, is a late star of musical comedy. Both members of the duo are endowed with personality, attractive appearances and good stage manners. Miss McConnell's gowns are said to be sensations.

A canary of nearly human intelligence, known everywhere as "The Golden Bird," will be presented by Lorraine Evon, a charming violinist. The bird will prove itself a thorough musician, for it mingles its notes with the strains of Miss Evon's enrapturing violin. To enable persons to observe the canary closely, it will be carried through the audience. Much wonder has been expressed over the bird's magical skill in attuning its voice to Miss Evon's violin.

BIRDS ARE STILL THE CHAMPION AVIATORS

Birds have some secret—many secrets—for navigating the air which man has not learned. Some men aviators have gone higher in the air than any birds seem to go, but so far as human records go there is nothing to show that a condor, eagle or other highflying bird ever tried for the altitude prize.

The Carolina rail or sora, has small, short wings, apparently ill adapted to protracted flight, and in ordinary circumstances when it is forced to fly it does so reluctantly and alights as soon as possible. It flies with such awkwardness and seems to become so quickly exhausted, and yet in the course of its annual migrations this bird is known to fly very long distances without stopping.

CHURCHES TO HOLD SPECIAL SERVICES NEW YEAR'S EVE

Special Watch Night Service of Church Federation Tonight at Methodist Church

ST. JOSEPH'S CATHEDRAL TO HAVE SERVICE AT 7:30 P. M.

Catholic Churches to Celebrate Masses on New Year's Morning

NEW YEAR'S eve will be observed by a special watch night service at the First Methodist church Sunday evening. The services will be under the auspices of the Church Federation of La Crosse.

At 7:30 p. m. Sunday a special New Year's eve service will be held in the Cathedral of St. Joseph. The sermon, to be preached by the pastor, the Rev. Peter Pape, will be in German.

Masses Monday Morning

Masses will be said in all the Catholic churches Monday morning. At the cathedral, mass will be said at 7, 8 and 10:15 a. m. the last mass being high mass. The sermon will be in English. Masses in other Catholic churches will be at 8 and 10 a. m.

At the union services Sunday night at the First Methodist church, Eighth and King streets, members of the other churches of the Federation will drop in for a neighborly visit with the above organization partly with the view of congratulating upon the reopening of their house of worship after the disastrous fire of last spring.

While the new church here is not quite ready for occupancy the interior decorations are being completed. The cells have been strengthened and the new church is different from the old one. Under the new plan the church will be a more modern and comfortable place.

PITTSBURGH ELEVEN EASILY DEFEATS STANFORD UNIVERSITY

FORESEES CONFLICT BETWEEN ATHLETIC UNION AND N. A. A. F.

Agree to Meet at New York in January to Settle Promotion of Championships

BOSTON, Mass.—William C. Prout, president of the American Athletic Union, sees in the decision of the National Amateur Athletic federation to promote sectional and national athletic championships, as reported in press dispatches, possible conflict with the N. A. A. F. and possible violation of a gentleman's agreement between officials of the two organizations.

He said Saturday that it had been arranged in November that committees of the organizations should have a conference in New York January 27 and that until the conference any action on such matters was to be held in abeyance.

NEW YORK.—Henry C. Breckinridge, president of the National Amateur Athletic association Saturday expressed the hope that before its next annual meeting the N. A. A. F. will have brought all national sport governing bodies together. He declined to comment on the statement of William C. Prout, criticizing the N. A. A. F.

BUCK HERZOG WANTS RUBE BENTON CASE REOPENED IN COURT

No Further Passing of Buck, Says Benton's Attorney on Saturday

PATMORE, Md.—Buck Herzog, former major league star, who was mentioned in the Rube Benton case, now before Baseball Commissioner Landis, wants the affair reopened and has retained Charles H. Knapp as his attorney. Knapp is well known in baseball, having served as Jack Dunn's legal adviser for years.

"There will be no further passing of the buck, baseball authorities must either clear Herzog of any possible suspicion or else convict him," said Mr. Knapp Saturday.

"Herzog is not sure that he ever will again be connected with organized baseball or not. But that doesn't matter."

MISS AMERICA I WINS SECOND HEAT OF RACE PROGRAM

Yacht is Piloted by Garfield A. Wood of Detroit; Miss Detroit VI Second

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—Miss America I, piloted by Garfield A. Wood of Detroit Saturday won the second heat of a three-day racing program for speed boats being held under the auspices of the California yacht club and the Los Angeles Athletic club motorboat racing association, covering the thirty-mile triangular course in forty-one minutes 17-25 seconds.

The Miss Detroit VI, piloted by Charles F. Chapman, finished second in 42 minutes, 18-45 seconds.

PANESE TENNIS STARS TO RETURN HERE FOR GAMES

NEW YORK.—The first note in international tennis play for 1923 was Saturday in announcement of the United States Lawn Tennis association that Ichibi Kumagae and Kashio, Japanese stars, soon to prepare for the season on American courts.

Younger Japanese players will accompany Kumagae and Kashio. One of the new-comers is Fukuda, winner of the Japanese national championship last year in which Kumagae and he did not compete.

NOHUE TO COACH LOUISIANA STATE AT BATON ROUGE

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Mike Donohue, football coach and athletic director at Auburn announced Saturday that he had resigned at Auburn and that he had signed a contract with Louisiana state university to coach the Louisiana State team for five years at $10,000 a year. Donohue was $4,400 a year for Auburn team, of which he was a member, but, added he could not decide whether he would accept the new position.

WON FOR PRESIDENCY

By the Associated Press. Cardinal has been mentioned for the presidency of the union, Saturday he was a member of the union, but, added he could not decide whether he would accept the new position.

Ball players' union is the players and in no way the sport, I am in the asserted. "However, comes first."

CHAMPIONS IN VARIOUS LINES OF SPORTING ACTIVITY HERE SHOWN IN REVIEW OF 1922

IN the world of sport as in many lines of activity, champions come and go. To some a title is little more than a passing fancy, while others cling to it for years.

There has been created in La Crosse during the past year many new champions in the various lines of sporting activity. Individuals alone in any one activity, or more groups of individuals forming athletic teams of different kinds have been displaced by others who stand out before the sporting public of La Crosse as "champions" in their particular line of sport.

Perhaps chief among the new champions of La Crosse, granting that baseball is La Crosse's major sport, is the Montague baseball club which won the Nelson clothing company city championship as a result of besting the north siders in three out of five games in the city series. The year previous the Nelson club was undisputed champion of the city by reason of its unanimous victory over the La Crosse club in three games.

Review of the records of the Montague club shows that the team came steadily to the fore, showing the annexing of "Syl" McCauley to the pitching staff of the club. Some time later the Angell brothers were added, which together with a general re-organization of the team, produced excellent results which came to a fitting climax in winning the city championship.

Previous to the time when McCauley was added to the club as its pitcher, the victories of the aggregation were few. McCauley came to the local club for the first time in the game at Copeland park with the Minneapolis Sash and Door company, the Montagues winning 4 to 3. Syl's mound exhibition was the outstanding feature of the game, dazzling the eyes of the spectators to the tune of 16 strikeouts. To further stamp himself steadfastly in the hearts of his many admirers, Mac turned in a single and a double at bat. He has been signed to appear again with the Montagues for next season.

Previous to 1921 when the La Crosse and Montague teams, respectively, shared the local diamond, the Nelson baseball club must be given credit of supplying La Crosse fans with exhibitions of national pastime. The club began under that name 12 years ago, playing here and there where an available plot could be found on which to stage a game, until two years ago, by permission of the city park department, the Copeland park grand stand came into existence through the fruits of its efforts.

WHAT was considered the snappiest little Junior baseball league ever conducted in the city was that of the La Crosse Outdoor Sports Association. The league was composed of six teams, Kolbo Brothers, Wile Brothers, Reimans, La Crosse News company, Levy's and Dahl's Fords, the latter winning the championship pennant. The league swung into action with the opening game on May 29, at Copeland park.

In a post-season series for the championship outside of the Junior league between the Rivoli nine and the Dahl's Fords, the former won and received a huge pennant on which were inscribed all the names of the players on the winning team. According to the terms of the agreement, the losing team was compelled to buy for the other the pennant.

The Dahl's Fords lost but three games in the entire Junior league competition, being defeated by the Reimans, La Crosse News and Wile Brothers.

THE Normal school baseball team I might easily be considered one of the strongest among Normal schools of the state. The Normal Baseball team was undefeated feated throughout the season lasting during the spring months of the school term, in which time it met and defeated such teams as River Falls, Luther college, Winona and others in the state. Owing to the short season some of the Normals have not included baseball as one of the sports participated in.

THE high school football championship in the state of Wisconsin is never decided, much to the regret of eleven all over the state. High School Grid state who strive to Title Not Decided build up aggregations worthy of such title. In spite of her defeat at the hands of invading Superiores, the La Crosse high school did wonderfully well on the gridiron this year. The team met and defeated prominent teams over a greater territory than is usually included in the schedule of the high school eleven. With a majority of the men back at school this fall, fans look to a championship, as far as it may be decided under the present inefficient system, for La Crosse in 1923.

NO great success attended the La Crosse Normal football team in the season just over. But three conference games were Normal Seventh played, La Crosse in Grid Standing winning and losing one, the third being tied with Oshkosh. With Eau Claire and Whitewater chalked up with two wins apiece without any defeats, and failure of the squads to get together on a play-off battle, the Normal football championship rested between these two schools. Oshkosh was runner-up and La Crosse took seventh place when the final standings were made up.

THE La Crosse high school cage squad, winner of the district elimination event held under auspices of the La Crosse Normal High School, met at the state meet at Madison. La Crosse won the wind-up game in the district meet here against Hillsboro, 31 to 17. The Red and Black got "across" with flying colors in its first encounter at Madison, defeating the much touted Watertown quintet in the first game, 23 to 15. New Richmond, strong entry of the River Falls Normal section, clamped the lid on the local chance on the following day, however, eliminating Kedron's squad, 29 to 17.

In the final game Fond du Lac won from New Richmond, 22 to 19, and became state champions.

THE La Crosse Normal school won the basketball championship from among the Normal schools of the state in 1921-1922. Maroon and Gray Oshkosh Normal Win Cago Title furnished strong opposition for the local quintet and when the end of the season came around, the schools were undefeated in their respective localities. Oshkosh sent out a formal challenge for a three-game series to decide the state title, the first game being set for La Crosse, the second at Oshkosh, and the third, if a third was necessary, to be played on a neutral floor agreed upon by both schools. As it happened, the third game was not necessary, for La Crosse, with perhaps the strongest aggregation that ever represented the local Normal, won two straight from the easterners to clinch the title.

BOWLING in the city of La Crosse has come to occupy an important place among La Crosse sports and so enthusiastic have bowlers become that it is stretched out over a greater length of time than is usually accorded the sport in many places. With the coming of the new Arcade alleys, providing more commodious and accessible quarters, bowling interests in the city have assumed greater proportions this year and from the increased numbers showing interest in the sport, including the women, it is evident that even greater things will come for the famous ten-pin game in La Crosse.

The Hotel La Crosse team, composed of Ollie Miller, captain, George Schneebarger, Gene Hunt, Oscar Paulson, Henry Wittenberg and John Williams, were champs of the city bowling league in the season of 1921-1922. The team won 63 games and lost 18.

The Rompers headed the list after the final round in the Elks' league in 1921-1922 season, carrying off the honor of champions of the organization. In the previous season, 1920-1921, the Antlers, composed of Von Wald, Bleekman, Dietz, Erickson, Frisch and Davey, won the championship. Members of the Rompers who won the title last year were: C. A. Dittman, captain, Schultz, Huebner and Shirven.

The third league in existence last season was the commercial. It was organized last year and is continuing with great success this season. The Montagues won the first commercial league title. The team was composed of A. Klawitter, captain, Shuda, Fromanek, Stadler and Tanke.

The Fraternal bowling league of last season was not continued this year. The championship was won by the B. P. O. E. from a field of eight teams.

In the church athletic league, then in its infancy regarding the scope of activity, the First Methodist aggregation won the bowling title.

THE Hennepins, composed of John Benesh, captain, Kocour, Guenther, Hackner and Stoll, were champions of the Knights of Columbus bowling league last season.

AT the close of the regular bowling season, the Montagues, commercial league champions, and the Hotel La Crosse, city league champions, got together on a post-season match for the title of the city. The Hotel La Crosse team overwhelmed the commercial league winners by nearly 300 pins, piling up a total of 2998 against 2547 for the Montagues.

BASING championships on the official skating races held under the auspices of the La Crosse Winter Skating Championships, Ole Klandrud appears foremost in the field of La Crosse skaters as champion, winning all three events in which he was entered in the racing program. Klandrud won the mile, quarter-mile and half-mile events. In addition he has won many races staged at Copeland park.

In the quarter-mile for boys, Fred Baum showed supremacy over the field, while Rose Hanlan bested the other entries in the women's half-mile race. In the couples race, Joe Shields and Helen Wells were the winners. Allen Yeo took first in the quarter and half-mile open events, while his brother, Ralph, came under the wire in the lead in the one-mile open race.

SKI jumping is in its infancy in La Crosse. With some of the best professionals from over the country participating in initial tournament here last January, the La Crosse entries in the professional and amateur events were naturally unable to deliver any championships for this city. Torliet Knutson of La Crosse, placed fifth in the professional class with jumps of 92 and 93 feet to score 125 points. Dr. Sivertson, the other La Crosse entry, failed to place within the first eight in the amateur division. He made jumps of 72 and 78 feet.

With new improvements on the present ski slide to be made, the National Ski tournament is talking La Crosse as the place for the annual event in another year. Plans are under way for a tournament here in January, immediately following the annual meet at Lanesboro.

WARREN RUPLIN, racing in a field of five entries, repeated his success of 1921 by winning the Dog Derby event at the Winter Carnival.

Ruplin holds Dog Derby Title last January. More real laughter was enjoyed by spectators of the Dog Derby than perhaps any other event of the carnival. To see the youthful drivers with their hearts set on a victory scrambling in an effort to head their dogs in the general direction the finishing wire was lots of fun. Virtually all the canines in the neighborhood were aroused by the barking of the racing dogs who passed no opportunity to dash sideways over a snow-bank and side-walk to greet their brothers on the way. But, the drivers stuck hard by and the common alley dogs interfering with the progress of the race were sent home with a yelp, while the "steeds" were yauked back on the street and urged on.

RAY HUEBNER, representing the R. S. & H. cigar store, in the annual round-robin pocket billiard tournament among La Crosse billiard rooms, was the city champion in this championship in the season of 1921-1922. The winner of the city billiard title of the various cities of the state goes to Madison to participate in the state tournament for the title in Wisconsin. Huebner was eliminated in the state meet at Madison, Pendle, of Appleton, winning the cue title of the state in the Madison tournament. In the present tournament, Huebner and Armstrong, representing Roth's billiard room, are tied for first place. Players in the tournament have recessed for the holidays.

DICK PAULSON, champion "bike" rider for the year of 1921, repeated his success during the past summer after a Paulson Champion series of challenges and a cycle event put on by the Campbell cycle agency all of which wound up with Paulson as the victor. In the cycle event staged by the Campbell cycle agency, Paulson was temporarily forced to abandon his title in favor of Frank Muth, winner of first prize in that event.

Not satisfied with the results of the race, Paulson took it upon himself to redeem his lost laurels and sent out a challenge to Muth for a five-mile race at the Inter-State fair ground track. The deft was accepted by Muth and Paulson went over in record time to retract what he had lost only a short time before. Further defending his title, Paulson accepted a challenge from Wayne Veneman for the city championship on the two-wheeled vehicle and the present title holder came through victorious.

As a bicycle racer, Paulson first came into the limelight in La Crosse when the La Crosse Outdoor Sports Association staged its athletic carnival of track and water events on the Fourth of July in 1921. Paulson, unidentified then among the rest of the numerous entries, won the "bike" events with plenty of room between him and the runner-up.

WHILE there has been no means of deciding the boxing championship among the various weights of La Crosse boxers, the name of Jimmy Gill is the name of Jimmy Gill, the La Crosse Speed Boy, now under direct management of "Peanuts" Schrieber, of Rock Island, stands out foremost in the circle of athletic performers in the city. Jimmy has come through undefeated in a tough series of "Peanuts" battles of fighters and judging from the showing he has made in mixes with prominent boys of the ring, he is destined to go far, barring all accidents.

Incidentally, the year has marked the advent of boxing shows staged regularly under the auspices of the Roy L. Vingers Post of the American Legion. The Legion has met all requirements of the state boxing commission and already two legalized bouts have been put on under its direction. The third card will be held on January 16.

THE church athletic league of La Crosse is an organization of the local Protestant churches under the leadership of the Church Athletic Y. M. C. A. and League Activity tends to take care of the physical phase of church activities. About three years ago this league was organized and at that time was limited to events for boys only. Later on it was broadened to include some events for seniors and older men until now it takes in a scope of twenty different leagues either operating now or in the process of organization.

Last spring the eight different leagues which constituted the league at that time included the following events: Junior, Intermediate and Senior basketball; Senior volleyball; Senior bowling; Junior base ball (indoor); Junior and Senior track meet. These leagues had a wonderful season and finished very close. In fact, several of them required championship games to determine the winner. The First M. E. church teams appeared to have the edge on the other churches by winning five of the eight trophies and also taking the sweepstakes loving cup. The winners of the leagues were as follows: Junior basketball, German Lutheran; Intermediate basketball, English Lutheran; Senior basketball, First M. E.; volleyball, First M. E.; bowling, First M. E.; indoor base ball, First Baptist; Junior track, First M. E.; Senior track, First M. E.

This fall it was thought worth while to broaden the scope of events for both the boys and men. A card containing a list of proposed events was handed to every man and boy in the several churches with instructions for them to check the events in which they were interested. A fine response was received and this gave a fine working basis for the organization of the new leagues.

SIDELIGHTS ON NORMAL BASKET BALL JOURNEY

Hippo Poscover was right at home in every town the team stayed in. There wasn't a town that half the population didn't know him by his first name.

Joe Shields and Ole Gunderson were the Rudolph Vassilinos on the trip. The girls all thought they were so "cute". At Indianapolis they had to hire Bill Rees to keep the fairer sex from tearing them apart. Bill could do it too.

Nick Stoneman proved to be the card shark of the trip. Ask him. Hippo had the nerve to say that Ole Gunderson was the biggest eater he ever saw. Hippo must have seen himself in a mirror when he said that.

Bill Rees went into a restaurant in Crawfordsville and asked, "What kind of sandwiches have you got." "Ham and Brain," came the reply. "What? Brain?" asked Rees. "Give me ham, I don't need no brains. I'm from La Crosse normal."

Nehr and Tubby had trouble keeping track of Dinty Moore. When they found him, he was getting his hair oiled in a barber shop. He spent a great deal of his time in the hair dresser's shop.

HEARD ON THE TRIP
Tubby—"Go out there and play forty minutes of hard basketball and then we get a good night's rest."
Nehr—"Don't worry about when you eat."
Hippo—"Geo, Tubby, I'm hungry."
Ole—"Got a stamp?"
Joe Shields—"Little hard luck 's all."
Stoney—"Let's go, gang."
Bill Rees—"If this is Illinois, ship me back to the United States."
Jerrison—"Hit me and take it."
Dinty Moore—"Where a barber shop?"

PET HABITS
Tubby—"Smoking Nehr's cigars."
Nehr—"Cutting down expenses."
Joe Shields—"Yanking the women."
Hippo—"Loking through all the papers for write-ups."
Jerrison—"Eating."
Dinty Moore—"Playing poker."
Stoney—"Sleeping."
Bill Rees—"Talking (about nothing)" kidding "Hippo."

"BUDDY" MCDONALD AND JIMMY GILL WILL FIGHT HERE

Signed for Windup of Legion Show on Jan. 26; Nuffke and Sauer in Semi-finals

Walter Wold, chairman of the boxing committee of the Roy L. Vingers post of the American Legion, announced Saturday that he had signed "Buddy" McDonald of St. Paul to appear against Jimmy Gill in the ten round final bout of the next ring show of the Legion which is to be staged at Yeomen hall on Friday, January 26.

He also announced that Paul Nuffke, "the Goose Town Bearcat," has been signed to battle Charlie Sauer of Hokah, in the semi-windup event. The rest of the card will be announced later.

VICIOUS STANFORD DEFENSE PREVENTS GREATER TRIMMING

Panthers Carry Ball Within Stanford 20-yard Line Six Times But are Held

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif.—The Panther football team from the University of Pittsburgh had little trouble in defeating Stanford university, 16 to 7 here Saturday in the second east-west game of the season on the coast.

Only a vicious Stanford defense prevented the score from being high.

APOPLEXY FATAL TO FOOTBALL FAN
STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif.—Charles H. Bentley, vice president of the California Packing corporation and prominent resident of San Francisco, died of apoplexy while attending the football game here today between Stanford and Pittsburgh.

It was one Warner trained team playing against another and the most experienced eleven won. Glenn Warner, who is coach of the Panthers, is also advisory coach of the Stanford team and comes to take full charge of the eleven in 1924.

Costly Stanford fumbles helped Pittsburgh run up its score Saturday although it is probable that the scores would have been made any way for the Panther backfield fore through the line almost at will during part of the game.

HOCKEY PLAYERS MAY NOT CHANGE TEAMS IN LEAGUE

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Where two teams of the United States Amateur Hockey association are from one city, they will not be permitted to transfer players after the league season begins. W. S. Haddock, president of the association, ruled Saturday night on an application of Enright, of the Boston Victorias, to play with the Boston A. A. and Rudolph of the B. A. A., to go over to the Victorias. The residence rule was not involved.

INJURIES WILL NOT KEEP JOE KIRKWOOD OUT OF GOLF TOUR

DELMONTE, Calif.—Slight injuries to three fingers of one hand in an automobile mishap will not prevent Joe Kirkwood, former Australian open golf champion, from continuing his Pacific coast tour with Walter Hagen, British open champion, it was announced here Saturday.

In lighting from a machine Friday, Kirkwood's hand was caught between the door and the side of the car, and the three fingers slightly crushed.

RICHARD COLLINS, MIDSHIPMAN FROM LA CROSSE DISTRICT, MAKES BOXING TEAM IN FIRST YEAR AT ANNAPOLIS

FRIENDS here were pleased to hear recently that Richard Collins, son of Alderman Charles Collins, has been chosen as a member of the Naval Academy boxing team at Annapolis.

According to the story carried by Baltimore papers, Coach Webb who has charge of the boxing activities at the Naval Academy, had been searching all through the institution to find some one who could be depended upon to make a good showing in the bantam class. Collins showed up best in the tryouts, and was picked as a member of the team.

"Richie" as he is known to his many friends in La Crosse, is a member of the fourth or freshman, class at the academy. He received his appointment about a year ago and left the city last June. Though rather light, he took part in all sorts of athletics in the La Crosse high school and at the Y. M. C. A. He had already made somewhat of a name for himself as an amateur boxer before leaving La Crosse.

The Jewett offers 2800 pounds of tested metal and fine mechanical construction. It is heavy because it is built to endure. The frame, axles and all other chassis units were selected, not because of their cost, but because of their strength and efficiency. All this, with a superb 50-horsepower, six-cylinder motor, can be yours for $995 f. o. b. Detroit.

That's only part of the story. Get behind the wheel and learn the rest.

'22 BANNER YEAR IN LA CROSSE ROAD CONSTRUCTION WORK

County Prepared to "Carry on"
With Plans to Maintain and Build New Highways

MANY MILES OF MACADAM
CONSTRUCTED IN THE YEAR

Bond Issue to Aid in Raising
Money to Continue 1923 Plans

NINETEEN twenty-two was a banner year in highway construction in La Crosse county and plans are already under way to continue the work started last year throughout the new year.

During the 1922 season of construction work the following was accomplished by La Crosse county: 14.4 miles of 18-foot macadam surfacing; one mile of 15-foot macadam; 17.1 miles of 9-foot macadam; 12 concrete bridges; five concrete culverts; 34 miles of heavy grading and widening; 57 miles of light grading and widening; 12,290 lineal feet of guard rails built along state trunk highways and county trunk lines.

Where Work Has Been Done

Included in these statistics of macadam construction were the widening of the Hunter's road to a width of 18 feet; the widening of the South Salem road, trunk line 21, and the completion of the Schneck-pepper road on the same trunk line; the building of one mile of 15 foot road on the Rockland-Big Creek highway; the Long Coulee road in the town of Farmington; the Smith Valley and Wick Hill roads in the town of Campbell; and the laying of the foundation course on the Adams Valley road project in the town of Burns.

In bridges, the two more important jobs built were the Holmen bridge in the town of Holland, consisting of three forty foot spans, twenty-four feet in width, with elevated sidewalk on each side of the bridge; and the Bremer bridge, a forty foot concrete structure in the town of Campbell on trunk line 21.

At the annual meeting of the county board in November it was voted to issue $240,000 in highway bonds, the amount of which, with other funds, is to be used in maintenance work principally during the coming year, thus assuring the people of La Crosse county well maintained roads and guarding against any deterioration of road work already done.

Hintgen Reviews Year's Work

"This year is a banner year in the number of miles of 18-foot road built and the number of cubic yards of stone quarried and crushed," said John Hintgen, county highway commissioner, in reviewing the work of the past year. "The county has built fourteen and four tenths miles of eighteen foot road, thirteen and four tenths of which have been made from the old nine foot road. Holmen, Mindoro and South Salem roads are excellent examples of this type of road.

"The county is operating four stone quarries, all of which have already paid for themselves, and besides are placing on the roads, cheaper material than would be possible from any other source.

"How have good roads developed our community? No hesitancy is necessary to answer this question. The proof of the economical value is so self evident that it needs no discussion.

"However, there is another value which citizens in our practical America fail to realize. What has made it possible for the people from far and near to enjoy our hills, coulees, rivers, creeks and farms? What has made it possible for our citizens to enjoy and drink in the beauty of the scene from the Mindoro car? What has helped in making the scenic views from the St. Joseph ridge accessible? What has made the other numerous beauty spots and drives approachable for real enjoyment?

Maintained Road is Answer

"The maintained surfaced road. The 250 miles of maintained surfaced and graded roads have made it possible for the citizens and tourists, whether owners of bicycles, flivvers, or Pierce-Arrows, to enjoy every beauty spot which La Crosse county possesses. So let us not forget to give the well maintained surfaced road credit in being the 'open doorway' to the natural loveliness with which the county abounds."

The goal set by La Crosse county in highway construction and maintenance is aptly set forth in the report of the members of the state road and bridge committee of the county board, which is composed of Adolph Nettleman, R. W. Davis, V. S. Keppel, E. W. Guenther and John L. Ash. The report says, in part:

La Crosse Ranks With Leaders

"The rapid progress and the work accomplished during the past year in construction, improvement and maintenance on our county and town highway systems has enabled us to retain the position which we have held as one of the foremost counties in the state in modern road improvement."

"We feel that we are nearing our original goal. Adherence to policies and plans so well formulated many years ago when our road improvement plans were initiated has kept us from the delays incident to indecision and unpreparedness which are frequently the most disturbing factors in any improvement program. We speak of nearing our original goal, not because we are approaching the end of road building or road improvement, but because we have made such progress in laying the foundation of a county system of improved highways serving the majority of the people and the greater portion of the entire geography of the county. Perhaps it will be necessary to set a new goal in keeping with the demands for progress made by the constantly growing traffic using our highways.

Decline in Costs

"The past season has shown a decided decline in the cost of construction and maintenance, despite the fact that the heavier traffic, never anticipated in the earlier days of paved highways, called for more intensive maintenance and the addition of a number of patrol divisions. Costs, however, have long since been secondary to our people whom, we believe, fully realize that improved roads are more important than their cost, by comparison with the cost of bad roads or no roads.

"We have progressed not only consistently with our paving program, but with other associated features of our highway improvement, particularly with the work of grading and widening roads on the county highway system and have also been enabled to aid the towns in grading and widening a large mileage of the more important town roads.

"We are gradually nearing the goal in the construction of bridges in this county, although there remain a number that we may be required to re-build on account of their width, during the next few years. This is noticeable in our budget estimates for the ensuing year which contains no item for a large amount of bridge aid or county bridge construction. Wider roads and roads built to stand the heavier and more intensive traffic, stronger and wider bridges and grade separations wherever possible are among our established standards and are met when their need and our appropriations have permitted us to proceed.

Adjust Patrolmen's Pay

"The scale of wages for patrolmen was readjusted slightly reduced from that of former years. Patrolmen with teams are now paid at the rate of from $125.00 for new men to $140.00 for trained men per month. Patrolmen on trucks are paid from $80.00 for new men to $90.00 per month for trained employees. Patrol helpers are paid 30c per hour actual time. The scale of wages for day labor, under the agreement with the chairmen of the several towns, was fixed at the rate of 30c per hour for men and 25c per hour for teams.

The state prospective highways in the county have all been marked by letters and direction and intersection signs placed upon the more important highway connections throughout the county, and a map of all such markings has been published for the benefit and information of the public. This system of marking county roads has been received by the public with marked approval and has proven that such systems of marking highways are considered a necessary part of present day highway improvement.

"Trunk line highways were kept clear of snow as far as possible during the winter months and with the co-operation of the towns, all main traveled roads in the county were kept open for travel during the past winter season.

Some Safety Measures

"The order of the railroad commission, requiring grade separations on the Wolf and Dutch creek crossings on trunk line 21 in the town of Bangor, has been complied with to the extent that the right of way has been purchased, the bridge and culverts required have been built and it is expected to grade and open the road to travel before the end of the year. The petition filed for protection on the North Salem road and Onalaska crossings over the C. B. & Q. railroad was granted by the railroad commission and crossing watchmen were ordered on the Onalaska and North Salem road crossings, and a safety signal established on the South Salem road. At the request of the C. B. & Q. railroad company, the matter of grade separations on the Onalaska and North Salem road crossings was considered.

A tentative plan was submitted by the railroad company to the committee and the Wisconsin highway commission, providing for a viaduct and the laying out of a new highway extending from a point near the signal tower along and east of the railroad right of way to connect with trunk line 11 in the city of Onalaska.

This viaduct would eliminate the use of both the Onalaska and North Salem road crossings. The committee determined that the railroad company should be required to submit a detailed proposal and plan for the grade separations as suggested for further consideration by the committee and the highway commission, and the matter is still pending.

Operation of Quarries

"The Adams valley quarry in the town of Burns was opened at the beginning of the season and has been operated since to furnish stone for the Adams valley road project. The committee purchased ten acres of land for this quarry at a cost of $200.00. It is proposed to use stone from this quarry for widening and resurfacing trunk line 21 north from the village of Bangor to complete the widening of the road, and also for future work contemplated in widening and resurfacing the North Bangor-Salem road.

"The quarry rights and right of way for the Severson quarry in the town of Farmington were secured, but the quarry has not as yet been opened and operated. The committee deems it advisable for the present to use stone from the Lewis quarry in the widening and resurfacing of trunk line 108 leading to Mindoro, of which there remains to be completed about two and one half miles. Limestone has been furnished to the farmers of the county from the Wolf quarry and the Holland quarry.

About eight hundred tons have been sold to farmers from the Holland quarry and about one hundred tons from the Wolf quarry."

GETTING ALONG WITH LESS MEAT

There has been noted among German people a very decided tendency to get along with less meat than formerly which is borne out by the official figures. The average per capita of meat consumption in Prussia in 1913 amounted to more than 101 pounds, whereas in 1921 it was less than 63 pounds. This is due to many reasons but the principal one is that the meat has not been attainable. To supply this want the officials of the German government have recently entered into a contract with the Argentine government to supply 50,000 tons of mutton and 80,000 tons of beef annually, to be paid for in German goods.

The Standard of Comparison

Driving Comfort in Winter

The Buick "Model 45" Six Cylinder—$1195

A Double Protection

In addition to fitting perfectly without a gap, the storm curtains on Buick open models are provided with a weather strip or flap which seals the joint so that wind or rain cannot penetrate. Buick open cars, with the curtains in place, have no cracks for cold to penetrate. They are as nearly weather tight as any open car can be.

As complete as has been the development of the enclosed car, Buick designers have not neglected to improve the open type of car, building into it a measure of comfort, convenience and weather protection surpassed only by the more expensive closed vehicle.

Protection against wind and snow is assured by the snug-fitting storm curtains that open with the doors. The Buick design of storm curtains with a special weather strip provides a coziness, comparable to that of any closed car, while windshield wiper and tight fitting windshield, adjustable from within, make driving safe and comfortable.

Added to this, and equally important in winter driving, is the splendid performance that a Buick car always produces—its constant and surplus power—its roadability and perfect balance and its unquestioned dependability.

For cold weather driving there is no superior to the Buick open cars.
